Senate Votes 75c Wage But Exempts 250,000

1,250,000 to Benefit; Bill's Final Form Up to Conference; Senators Recess

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate last night approved a 75-cent-an-hour floor under wages, a major labor plank in the Truman platform, but exempted about 250,000 workers from coverage.

Then, in double celebration of Labor Day, it took a one week's recess.

Grateful leaders ordered a holiday until Wednesday, September 7, after the Senate stemmed a Southern drive to water down the minimum wage boost and further limit the number of workers covered.

They hailed the bill as a major improvement over the House-passed bill, which exempted some one million employes, and promised to press for broadened coverage in the future.

A Forward Step, Pepper Says

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), floor manager of the measure, voiced "regret" at the restricted coverage, but described the bill as a "forward step."

Pepper estimated some 1,250,000 low-paid workers will receive wage increases under the legislation and said more than 300 million dollars in direct wage increases will be distributed the first year.

The bill now goes to conference, where Senate managers will seek to whittle down the number of House exemptions.

Child Labor Rules Stiffened

The central provision of both measures raises the 40-cent ($16-a-week) minimum established in 1938 to 75 cents (or $30 a week). Child-labor provisions of the old law are strengthened and the wage-hour administrator if necessary can sue for wages due under the bill.

To insure passage of the measure, leaders recently dropped the Administration's fight for broader coverage and fought a defensive floor action against further exemptions.

Pepper predicted a follow-up drive after the bill becomes law to bolster by millions the 22 million now covered, in complete fulfillment of the Truman pledge.

The principal Senate exemption was the so-called Holland amendment adopted Tuesday. This removes employes of most retail and service establishments from the law if more than 50 per cent of their annual volume of sales is made

Justice Rutledge Has Relapse in Maine Hospital

York, Me., Aug. 31 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Wiley B. Rutledge, ill at York Hospital, has had a relapse, a bulletin issued at the hospital late today said.

Justice Rutledge entered the hospital last Saturday with what was described as a "circulatory condition."

The bulletin was issued by Dr. Fred A. Geier, his personal physician, and Dr. Elmer Tower of Ogunquit.

Dr. Geier flew here from Washington today, his second visit to the 55-year-old Cloverport, Ky., native.

Earlier today Justice Rutledge had been reported out of danger. He and Mrs. Rutledge were vacationing at nearby Ogunquit.

U. S. Returns Pilot-Deserter To Russians

LIEUT. PIROGOV
. . . tells of "bribes, threats"

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A fast-moving game of double espionage between Federal Government authorities and the Russian Embassy involving two Red pilot deserters ended yesterday in Austria and New York.

Army authorities in Austria handed to Soviet officers one of the Red pilots who subsequently decided to go back to Russia. His delivery occurred 12 hours after the Russian Embassy in Washington publicly protested his "disappearance" here.

In New York, the other Russian pilot, intending to remain in the United States, publicly blasted the work of Soviet spies, agents and propagandists, and disclosed

Senate Unit Approves New Farm Aid Bill

Compromise Program To Extend Trade Act Flatly Rejected

President Truman intervened yesterday to help break the Senate log-jam with these two results:

1. A bipartisan farm bill, stripped of every vestige of the Administration's Brannan plan, took its place on the Senate calendar.

2. But a compromise extension of the long-snarled Reciprocal Trade Act was flatly rejected by the President and his Democratic leaders backed him up.

The trade act decision, reached at the first of two White House Democratic huddles, means the Administration has a two-to-three-week fight on its hands when the Senate returns from its Labor Day holiday on September 7.

Paves Way for Passage

But the farm bill compromise cleared the way for easy Senate passage of one Administration "must" that has been a bone of contention for weeks.

Senate Administration Leader Lucas (Ill.) said the net effect of the two decisions on adjournment plans will be virtually nil if Republicans "cooperate" to limit debate.

In the farm bill huddle, President Truman virtually gave his blessing to the compromise plan of a former Secretary of Agriculture, Senator Anderson (D., N. M.), while the man who now holds the office, Secretary Charles F. Brannan, sat quietly in the conference.

What Mr. Truman did was agree to let Senate leaders work out their own farm plan. They had already virtually turned down the Brannan plan to give farm-con-

Diplomats Doubt Russians Deploy Against Yugoslavia

London, Aug. 31 (AP).—Newspapers throughout western Europe splurged reports today of Russian troop movements along the borders of Yugoslavia. But British and American diplomatic sources here said they had heard nothing to indicate the reports were anything but rumors.

The reports were that five Russian divisions were grouped in Romania and Hungary near the Balkan nation which Moscow has labelled an enemy of the Soviet Union.

There was nothing official in Belgrade on the reports. The people in the Yugoslav capital apparently were calm.

The Yugoslavs officially denied reports that Tito is concentrating his troops in Macedonia (southern Yugoslavia).

10 Crewmen Lost In Sea Crash of Navy Flying Boat

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP). All ten crew members of a giant Navy Martin Mariner PBM flying boat died in a crash in the ocean two miles southwest of here this morning, the 11th Naval District reported.

Only one body was recovered floating in the wreckage. Rescue craft continued their search for other bodies.

Names of the six enlisted men and four officers aboard were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The 30-ton, two-engined patrol plane burst into flames after the crash in the fog-shrouded sea. The PBM was on a routine training flight. The craft belonged to squadron VP-46, which recently returned from duty at Saipan.

Compromise Plan Backed On Arms Aid

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A compromise program limiting United States arms aid shipments to western Europe to 100 million dollars until after common defense plans are worked out under the North Atlantic Security Pact was tentatively approved by the joint Senate committee yesterday.

The plan, informally adopted by the combined Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, followed the lines suggested by GOP foreign policy leaders, Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (Mich.) and John Foster Dulles (N. Y.). Sources close to the Administration indicated the proposal was acceptable.

The compromise provides a total of one billion dollars, the figure Vandenberg had proposed, to rearm Western Europe against Communist aggression.

President Truman originally asked $1,160,000,000 and the House voted only half the amount.

Aims to Spur Defense Plan

One tenth only of the billion would be available until after the defense council has been formed under the Atlantic Pact and adopted an over-all defense plan.

Britons Sail For Economic Parley Here

'Historic,' Says Bevin; Tito Row With Soviet May Be Discussed

Southampton, England, Aug. 31 (AP).—Britain's mission sailed today aboard the Mauretania for monetary and economic talks opening September 7 in Washington.

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, were waved away by a quayside crowd calling "good luck" and "bring us back some dollars."

Bevin said the parleys with United States and Canadian officials on Britain's financial straits would be historic in importance.

He said, "This is probably one of the most important missions in history. Unless we can find the right answer to the financial and economic problems we shall not have laid a sound foundation for the future peace of the world."

Although Bevin did not mention it, the mission may digress from money matters to secret talks on the Russian-Yugoslav situation.

Suppressed Picture Taken Reportedly for B-36 Hearing

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A suppressed, high-altitude photograph of Washington, which has figured in the Air Force-Navy controversy over the B-36 bomber turned up yesterday on the walls of a downtown cocktail lounge.

Taken from a Navy Banshee jet fighter plane from what is believed to be a record height of 48,846 feet, the photo now is on display at the Club 400, 1423 F st. nw.

How it got there is something of a mystery—and one that probably will not be solved officially.

First word of the existence of the picture leaked out nearly two weeks ago. It was reliably reported that the photo was taken to disprove claims of some Air Force men that jet fighters could not climb to altitudes at which the Consolidated-Vultee B-36 bomber would fly on combat missions.

It was said that Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, who is scheduled to give a rebuttal of Air Force claims of near-invincibility of the B-36, planned to use the photograph in testimony before the House Armed Services Committee.

At any rate, the Navy refused to release prints of the picture when the papers and news services asked for them a week ago.

Then yesterday, a reporter spotted a blown-up aerial shot of Washington on the wall of the cocktail lounge. With it was a clipping from The Washington Post telling of the record altitude photographic work.

Where did it come from? According to the United Press, the "proprietor" of the restaurant told one of its reporters that an "unidentified naval officer" gave him the photo and told him to "go ahead and plaster this on your wall."

But both Charles Bomze and his son, Norman A. Bomze, who operate the place, say this is not so. They declare it was found by Head Waiter Gus Rallis in a booth after a party had left. Rallis says he doesn't recall whether there were any men in uniform in the party or not.

Norman Bomze said he suspected that it was a Navy picture because he had just read about it in the paper. He said they had held the print for four or five days, in case some one should come for it, and then they decided it would look well on the walls—which are

Army Officer's Wife Robbed of $2760 in Jewels

Alexandria police yesterday sought a thief who made off Tuesday with $2760.50 in jewels belonging to an Army officer's wife.

Mrs. S. W. Roth, wife a lieutenant colonel attached to the National Guard Bureau at the Pentagon, said the jewels were taken from her apartment at 916 Manor rd. during the afternoon while she was away.

Mrs. Roth said her daughter had also gone out and had left the key for her mother under the door mat. When Mrs. Roth returned, about supper time, the front door was ajar and her jewel box was empty. The key was also gone from under the mat.

Among the items reported missing were a $900 opal and diamond bracelet and a $700 opal and diamond brooch.

7 Pct. Boost in D. C. Gas Rates Backed by PUC Accountant

By Tom Winship
Post Reporter

The chief accountant of the Public Utilities Commission yesterday officially backed the Washington Gas Light Co. request for a 7 per cent rate increase to District consumers.

The PUC official, V. A. McElfresh, conditioned his approval on the proposition that the firm return to the so-called sliding scale method of rate determination which was dropped in 1947.

He also strongly recommended that the sliding scale principles should apply to Greater Washington as a whole, including the company's subsidiaries in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

McElfresh made clear, however, that the pending rate increase request would affect only the District for the present.

The staffs of the utilities commissions of the District, Maryland and Virginia already have begun studies aimed to devise a uniform area-wide system of rate adjustments. And on Tuesday, McElfresh urged the actual merger of WGL with its four out-of-District subsidiary gas distributors.

The PUC official threw his support to the gas company appeal for $900,000 in additional revenue in the form of a 7 per cent gas rate boost at yesterday's public hearing before the PUC in the District Building.

The gas case recessed last night until September 19, following which the commission will hand down its rate decision. PUC Chairman James Flanagan said hearings might resume on September 12 if Government witnesses are available on the earlier date.

Approval of the gas company request is estimated to mean an added 22 cents to the average home owner's monthly bill which, officials say, now runs to about $3.19.

To those who use gas for heating their homes as well as cooking, the proposal would add 80 cents to their average $11.46 monthly bill.

Lehman Says He'll Accept Democratic Bid for Senate

New York, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Herbert H. Lehman, who succeeded Franklin D. Roosevelt as Governor of New York, today announced he would accept the Democratic nomination to run for the United States Senate in a special election in November.

The 71-year-old Lehman said he would accept backing of the Liberal Party in the contest for the Senate seat left vacant by the resignation of the veteran New Dealer, Robert F. Wagner, and now held on an appointive basis, by John Foster Dulles, Republican foreign policy expert.

The Republicans have not yet chosen their candidate. Dulles, who has said he will not seek election to the post, will serve until December 1, and the winner of the special election will remain in office until the expiration of Wagner's term on December 31, 1950.

Lehman was a close friend of President Roosevelt and succeeded him as Governor in 1932, serving until 1942. He later served as director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, resigning in 1946 and staying out of public life.

He joined in supporting Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in her controversy with Francis Cardinal Spellman over Federal aid to parochial schools and Lehman made indirect reference to that matter today.

He told reporters that rumors he had asked assurances that a group of Roman Catholics be named as his backers were not true.

New Code Gives Autoist Chance To Justify Speed Above Limit

A new uniform traffic code for the District went into effect at 12:01 this morning.

It carries no sensational changes—drivers will still proceed on the right-hand side of the street. But the new code makes a number of revisions pertinent to motorists, bicyclists, pedestrians and those who use the horse for transportation.

Here are some of them:

"Prima facie" speed limits are substituted for "fixed" ones. This means that present speed limits are retained. But the motorist will get the chance now to prove to the judge that his exceeding them—say at 3 o'clock in the morning on a lonely thoroughfare—did not constitute a public hazard.

On the other hand, a motorist who drives so slowly as to impede traffic may now be arrested for it.

One of the oldest of driver complaints gets recognition: Unless traffic (such as parking) signs are in place and "sufficiently legible to an ordinarily observant person," no violation can be charged.

Hereafter drivers may park 12 inches from the curb instead of six. This new regulation sprang from complaints of fenders bumping curbstones.

From now on if a child driver runs past a red light, with his parent sitting by him, the parent may be charged with permitting it. Before, the law had no control over the parents.

'Lovable Sort Of Chap' Is Barred From White House

5-Percenter Hearing Told by General He Still Backs Waitt As Chemical Chief

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, apparently speaking from the heart, yesterday described John Maragon as "a lovable sort of chap."

The barrel-chested White House military aide said that, despite his affection for the so-called mystery man, he thought he had to be "washed up—fumigated."

Meantime, he implied, Maragon is to be barred from the White House.

General Vaughan's appraisal of Maragon, who is threatened with court action on charges of perjury and income tax fraud, came near the end of his testimony before the Senate subcommittee investigating 5-percenters and influence peddlers. His remarks, and the almost paternal tone in his voice, caused a certain amount of astonishment. Among the astonished, it seemed, was Committee Counsel William P. Rogers, who was questioning the President's aide and friend.

'Compliment,' Says Maragon

Maragon, who had been sitting in the back of the committee room, was asked later what he thought of General Vaughan's statement.

"I think it was a great compliment," he said.

"And what about the fumigating part?" he was asked.

"I still say it was a great compliment," Maragon said.

General Vaughan had startled committee members and spectators a short time before while he was being questioned about Maj. Gen. Alden Waitt, suspended chief of the Army Chemical Corps.

It was brought out early in the hearings that General Waitt, who wanted to be reappointed, had submitted to General Vaughan a memorandum on potential rivals for his job—a memorandum that led Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) to say that Waitt had tried to "cut their throats."

Still Strong For Waitt

Waitt himself, testifying later, said that General Vaughan had asked him for the memorandum. He said, also, that General Vaughan told him that he thought he ought to succeed himself.

General Vaughan said yesterday that he had asked General Waitt for "factual" reports on his fellow officers.

"Did you tell him you thought

Woman Ends Life After Gun Threats At Neighbor's

A 25-year-old Takoma Park woman shot and killed herself last night in a neighbor's home after threatening to shoot a Navy lieutenant and the neighbor woman.

Montgomery County police identified the woman as Mrs. Tess (Toni) Thrasher, 127 Ritchie ave. They said she lived in the home of Lieut. Harry Padbury, 28, a special student at George Washington University.

Padbury told police he found Mrs. Thrasher in "an excited condition" when he returned home from the university. An argument ensued, he said, and she ran into a neighbor's house at 129 Ritchie ave.

Following her, Padbury was met in the yard by the neighbor, Mrs. Alfred J. Beall. Both saw Mrs. Thrasher in an upstairs window brandishing a .32-caliber revolver belonging to Mrs. Beall's husband.

Mrs. Thrasher threatened to shoot the pair, then herself, Padbury related. The two in the yard ducked behind a telephone pole and almost immediately heard a shot. Running upstairs, they found Mrs. Thrasher lying across a bed.

Dr. Frank P. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, said the bullet entered her heart and emerged from the back, lodging in the wall. Powder burns were on her clothing.

Dr. Broschart said he would issue a certificate of suicide today.

Gen. Vaughan Thinks 'Lovable Chap' Maragon Needs 'Fumigating'

Truman Cites Gains

Labor Day Messages Tell Of Progress

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday called on American workers to celebrate Labor Day in the knowledge that they have won the highest standard of living in the world and "unequaled" political and social standing under the democratic system.

William Green, president of the AFL, and Philip Murray, president of the CIO, joined him in proclaiming the holiday next Monday an occasion for rededication to the American way of life.

But the labor leaders also called on organized labor to gird for battles still ahead—economic battles for higher wages and against rising unemployment, political battles in the 1950 congressional elections against supporters of the Taft-Hartley law.

The traditional Labor Day statements were issued against a background of mounting discord in labor-management relations. With one major strike already under way in the rubber industry, showdowns on fourth-round wage demands are scheduled within the next two weeks in the steel, coal and auto industries.

Also overshadowing the celebration of labor's holiday was the Government's latest estimate that 4,095,000 workers are jobless from coast to coast.

Mr. Truman called on Americans to pause in weekend merry-making for "a sober evaluation of the problems that labor, together with all other groups in our country, faces in our complex world."

The President made it plain, however, that he is optimistic for the future.

"The American worker enjoys an economic, political and social status solidly established on Democratic principles and unequaled elsewhere in the world," he said. "From time to time labor has suffered setbacks, but on each such occasion its essential strength has asserted itself and progress has been resumed. And as labor has progressed, so has the Nation."

Truman Talks Monday On Labor, Agriculture

The White House announced yesterday that President Truman's two speeches Monday will deal with (1) labor and (2) agriculture.

The labor speech will be made at the Allegheny County Free Fair at Pittsburgh around 11 a. m. (EST) after a flight from Washington.

Mr. Truman will fly from Pittsburgh to Des Moines, Iowa, for an agriculture speech around 5:15 p. m. (EST) at the annual convention of the Amvets. The Des Moines speech will be his third to a veterans organization in as many Mondays.

Network Sues FCC to Keep Prize Show

New York, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The American Broadcasting Company filed suit in Federal Court today in an effort to keep the Federal Communications Commission from stopping the music.

ABC, in its suit against the FCC, says the commission does not have the right to censor and that its ban on the big giveaway shows therefore exceeds the commission's power and is illegal.

The network, which is seeking to keep its show "Stop the Music" on the airwaves after the FCC's October 1 deadline for abolishing giveaway shows, charged that the FCC had wrongly defined such programs as lotteries. The suit charged that such a definition is not consistent with judicial interpretation.

The National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, which also have giveaway shows on the air, are expected to file similar suits this week.

ABC's complaint asked that a statutory court of three judges be convened to try the suit, so that the case would go immediately afterwards to the Supreme Court.

Coy Sees Truman, Has No Comment on FCC Ban

By The Associated Press

Wayne Coy, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, declined yesterday to discuss the agency's move to curb radio giveaway programs.

He was asked about the FCC's new rules after he had called on President Truman at The White House. He told reporters he had not taken part in the FCC decision and did not want to talk about it.

Coy returned from a three months visit to Europe on August 19, the day the decision was announced.

Coy said he reported to Mr. Truman on his visit to the International Telephone and Telegraph Conference in Paris and the conference in London on revision of the radio-telegraph agreement with the British.

he should succeed himself?" Counsel Rogers asked.

"I still think he should," Vaughan replied.

Quizzed on FBI Action

Under questioning, General Vaughan said he never had heard anything about the Federal Bureau of Investigation looking into a claim that he received money from Gambler Frankie Costello and other "liquor interests"; admitted that the FBI investigated an allegation that he accepted a $10,000 bribe in a "tax fix," later described as unfounded; and said there was no connection between a campaign contribution he got from a lawyer and a subsequent parole granted to the lawyer's client.

Toward the end, Counsel Rogers asked General Vaughan about his relations with Maragon.

"You indicated yesterday in your testimony," said Rogers, "that you thought he (Maragon) was difficult to reprimand. Would it not be an easy matter for you just to keep him out of the White House? Could you not just tell the guard to keep him out?

"I could do that, yes," said General Vaughan, "but Maragon is a lovable sort of chap. You cannot get mad at him. It is awful hard to, at least."

"Do you still feel that way in view of his refusal to testify on the ground it would incriminate him?"

"No, he has got to be pretty well washed up, fumigated, before I can . . ."

Counsel Rogers broke into say: "It gets beyond the point of lovable when he does that."

General Vaughan said something that seemed to suggest agreement with Rogers, and then added:

"I think most of Maragon's sins have not been with malice. I do not think that he half the time was sure about what he was doing himself."

Rogers recalled what he has called the "smuggling" incident—the time Maragon came back from Europe with dresses addressed to Miss Truman (which she didn't get) and a package supposed to contain champagne which turned out to be perfume oil.

"Was that a lovable thing to do?" Rogers asked.

"I certainly would not condone it in my brother, even," General Vaughan said.

"When a fellow does that it is a pretty shabby trick, and he sort of exploited his friendship with you."

"I think maybe he had taken a few advantages."

"Do you think it possible from now on, maybe, to keep him out of the White House?"

"I think it is not only possible, but probable," said General Vaughan, and laughter rippled through the committee room.

In reply to a question, General Vaughan said he did not recommend Maragon for employment with the Verley Co., dealing in perfume oil. He said that Maragon did his "own sales job" with David A. Bennett, head of Verley, and donor of the now famous deep freezers.

He went on to say that Maragon had a way of popping up with new jobs, and he wondered why Rogers should be surprised.

Rogers said that what surprised him was General Vaughan's statement of the day before that he still had a certain amount of confidence in Maragon. He said that he himself would have lost confidence in him.

"Well," said Gen. Vaughan, "I have a certain amount of affection for him in spite of his peculiarities, yes."

"Well," retorted Rogers, "I think as long as he is not using the White House itself as a source of operation, your affection is not important; but if he can use the White House . . ."

"I assure you," said General Vaughn, "I had no idea he was using it to that extent or using it at all, and I assure you that that would have been stopped long since if it had come to my attention."

The cordial relations that have been noted among Democrats and Republicans on the subcommittee appeared to be under a strain yesterday.

Once Chairman Hoey (D., N. C.), whose fairness and judicial approach have been praised by the Republicans, broke in to say:

"I think we are getting into chicken-feed stuff."

He made the remark while Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) was asking Gen. Vaughan about a car he helped a friend to buy—a car which landed in the black market.

Once, too, Senator Robertson (D., Va.) told Senator McCarthy that he assumed he would produce definite evidence in a case he was asking General Vaughan about, and that it was "not a fishing expedition."

Senator McCarthy answered sharply that it was not a fishing expedition.

The Wisconsin lawmaker had started out, the day before, asking General Vaughan about Frankie Costello, New York gambler. Yesterday he said that Costello was a partner of Phil Kastel and William Helis in a liquor business.

He asked General Vaughan whether the FBI had investigated a claim that he had received money from the "Schenley interests and the Costello interests" to exert pressure on the Department of Agriculture for more grain for the distillers.

"I never heard of it," General Vaughan said.

(In New York Schenley Distillers, Inc., issued the following statement: "General Vaughan never made any inquiry for us, was never paid anything by us, nor asked to do anything for us on grain or any other matter."]

General said that the FBI had investigated another matter, that Director J. Edgar Hoover talked to him about it, and that he offered to cooperate completely with Hoover's men.

"He sent two men to my office who went through my financial statements," General Vaughan said. "They went through my bank statement, went through my safe deposit box. They went to New Orleans, they went to Kansas City (and) to various other places that were mentioned in this allegation."

Assistant Is Sworn

Senator McCarthy kept after Vaughan about an FBI investigation concerning the Schenley and Costello interests, and, getting nowhere, said that if he didn't get the story, he was going to ask that Col. Cornelius Mara be sworn in.

Colonel Mara, assistant White House military aide, was sitting alongside General Vaughan.

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) thought it would be appropriate to hear Colonel Mara and "not leave up in the air an inference that there was a justified complaint made to the Justice Department that the President's aide had engaged in a crooked and illegal transaction."

Senator McCarthy apparently did not like the Virginian's remark.

"Mr. Robertson," he said, "had you been sitting here through this investigation, you would know nothing has been left up in the air. You would know everything we started we had completely run down."

"I am not thinking of the past," said Senator Robertson, "I am thinking of what is happening right now."

"If the Senator will bear with me," said McCarthy, "that is what I am doing. I am going to cover it in detail."

Colonel Mara was sworn in and, in reply to a question by Senator McCarthy, said he was not from Missouri but from New York. The Wisconsin Republican said he was glad to know that there was somebody in the Government who was not from Missouri.

Colonel Mara told him he visited the Department of Justice recently.

"For some time," he said, "there has been carried on in the newspapers by a certain newspaper commentator a vicious campaign against my boss."

He said a moment later that the commentator was Drew Pearson.

Hoover Investigation

"And about two years ago," he continued, "General Vaughan was advised by J. Edgar Hoover that he had to make an investigation based on certain allegations that General Vaughan had accepted a $10,000 bribe to fix a tax case of some kind."

Senator McCarthy asked if Drew Pearson or any one else made a charge that General Vaughan accepted a $10,000 bribe.

"I don't think I said that investigation was brought about by Drew Pearson," Colonel Mara said.

He went on to tell how he was "elated" by what was told him at the Department of Justice—that there was no evidence to substantiate the charge that General Vaughan accepted a bribe in fixing a tax case.

Colonel Mara was quite thirsty when he finished his testimony. He drank all the water in a glass in front of him, and then handed the empty glass to a nearby reporter with a request for a refill.

Mara's Glass of Water

The reporter handed the glass to another reporter and it traveled along in bucket-brigade fashion toward the water cooler. The man who actually filled it with water, it so happened, was Drew Pearson.

When the glass got back to Colonel Mara, a reported asked him if he knew who filled it for him. He didn't.

"Drew Pearson," he was told.

Pearson, Too

After the hearing, Pearson asked Chairman Hoey for permission to testify at this morning's session and got it. Hoey said Pearson thought "there was a suggestion in the testimony . . . that he made a charge of bribery against General Vaughan." He said Pearson contended that he made no such charge and wanted to correct the impression.

Senator McCarthy, at the outset of yesterday's hearing, amended a statement he had made the day before. He said:

"Yesterday I made a statement. I said that all along I have had the feeling that Mr. Vaughan did not profit financially personally because of these various deals. Then I added the statement that that was still pretty much my opinion.

"I am going to ask that the last half of that statement be stricken from the record . . ."

Asked About Files

When General Vaughan returned to the witness chair yesterday following Colonel Mara's appearance, Senator McCarthy said:

"General, would you object to having the FBI make its files . . . public, or in case Mr. Hoover does not desire to do that, would you object to have those files made available to our staff so they may go through them?"

"I see no reason why I should object to anything that the FBI or the Department of Justcie has on me being made completely available to the committee . . . I doubt very much though, Senator, whether my opinion would be of any great weight to the FBI."

"I am inclined to think you may be right," said McCarthy.

"I am inclined to agree with you," said Vaughan.

Campaign Contribution

A little later, Senator McCarthy asked General Vaughan if William H. Neblett, described as a law partner of the late Senator William G. McAdoo of California, ever gave him a campaign contribution.

General Vaughan said he had, adding that it was over $200.

McCarthy then asked if Neblett had come to him and asked him to exert his influence in the case of Robert Gould of Cincinnati, who was sentenced to six years for selling liquor in the black market.

General Vaughan said he referred Neblett to the Attorney General. He said he believed Neblett was attempting to get a pardon for Gould.

"You made an appointment for him with Justice," said McCarthy, "and very shortly thereafter Mr. Gould was out of the Federal penitentiary. Is that right?"

'Around Campaign Time?'

"No," said Vaughan, "I don't think it was very shortly, I think it was a year later or something."

He said, in reply to a question, that he didn't have the date when he saw Neblett.

"It was around campaign time, was it not?" McCarthy asked.

"I don't think that had anything to do with it," said Vaughan.

"Whether it had anything to do with it or not, did he not contact you around campaign time, give you a contribution, ask you to intercede in behalf of Mr. Gould?"

"He did not."

"He discussed with you last fall the release of Mr. Gould, did he?"

"No, it was a year ago, more than a year ago."

"Is it your statement that he did not discuss it with you last fall or that you do not remember whether or not he discussed it with you?"

Questions by Mundt

General Vaughan, replying to questions by Senator Mundt, said he passed on a total of $7000 in campaign contributions to the Democratic organization in Missouri in 1946.

He said he handed about $4000 to Roy Harper, Democratic State chairman, when Harper was in Washington. The money, he said, had been turned over to him by William Helis, race horse breeder.

General Vaughan said he delivered $3000 to Harper in Missouri on the occasion when he accompanied President Truman to Kansas City for the 1946 primary.

Senator McCarthy later on asked General Vaughan whether he bought a 1947 Oldsmobile for Mrs. Morris Cavanaugh of Spring Green, Wis.

In Need of Auto

The White House aide explained that he had known Mrs. Cavanaugh when he lived in Wisconsin. He said she called him and pleaded that she was desperately in need of an automobile, and asked him to get her one. He said that, after he promised to help, she said her fiance was coming to Washington and would drive the car back.

General Vaughan said that the fiance paid for the car.

"Do you know what happened to that car?" McCarthy asked.

"He got it and left town with it. I don't know what happened to it from there."

McCarthy then informed Vaughan that the car was found in the black market, and that Mrs. Cavanaugh admitted she made six or seven hundred dollars on it.

Introduction Sought

General Vaughan, asked to explain how he was getting automobiles when they were so scarce, said Mrs. Cavanaugh's fiance asked him to introduce him somewhere so that he could buy a car.

"I took him up to this—well, I don't remember, the Oldsmobile dealer, I don't remember where it was."

He said he also introduced the captain of the presidential yacht, Williamsburg, to the dealer. He thought, too, that Admiral James Foskett, then naval aide to the President, bought a car.

At this point, Chairman Hoey expressed the opinion that the matter had "gone far enough." He said it was probable that Senator McCarthy also had applications for help in getting cars.

Senator McCarthy insisted that it was important to bring out that the President's aide was securing cars for he black market.

"I do not think we ought to make statements like that," said Hoey. "There is no evidence before this committee that General Vaughan procured it for anybody with any sort of knowledge that they were going to use it for the black market."

It was about here that he made his observation about "chicken-feed stuff."

General Vaughan, in reply to a final question by Senator McCarthy, said it was "very much of a surprise" to him to hear that Mrs. Cavanaugh's car landed in the black market.

(At Spring Green, Wis., a niece of Mrs. Morris Cavanaugh said her aunt was away on business and could not be reached by telephone. It was said there that Mrs. Cavanaugh has been engaged in the logging business for many years, at one time operating 11 sawmills. In 1936 she estimated her production of railroad ties at 82,000 a year.)

Senator McCarthy, switching the testimony, asked Vaughan whether he had ever used Maragon's bank account or whether Maragon had ever used his.

"Nobody ever uses my bank account," he said, amidst laughter, "because it can't stand that much abuse."

Gift to Ecuador

A check for several hundred dollars will be presented today by the Club de las Americas to Senor Don Augusto Dillon, Ecuadorian Ambassador, to aid victims of the recent earthquake in Ecuador. The presentation will take place at 6 p. m. at the Ambassador's residence, 2320 Bancroft pl. nw.

U. S. Aid to China Is Urged by Legion

End of Romance

Miss Oberon Sees Count Die in Plane

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
COUNT CINI
Killed in plane crash . . .

MERLE OBERON
. . . before her eyes

Cannes, France, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Death ended today the romance between Actress Merle Oberon and wealthy Count Giorgio Cini, 31, as the handsome Venetian perished in a flaming plane crash while she watched.

The actress, 38, kissed him goodby at Saint Cassien airfield, then watched as his twin-engine plane smashed into a pine tree and burst into flames. She collapsed and was taken to a clinic.

Count Cini swooped low over the field and dipped the wings of his plane, apparently in a farewell salute. One wing-tip struck a tall pine, and the plane smashed to earth. The count was thrown clear but his head was crushed.

Killed with the count was his friend, Giorgio Iradello.

Cini, son of an Italian millionaire and a star of Italian silent movies, had been seen with Miss Oberon in the plush resorts and luxury restaurants of Europe, on yachts in the Mediterranean and in London theaters.

She divorced her second husband, Lucien Ballard, Hollywood cameraman, in 1948, but said a few months ago she was enjoying her "freedom" too much to consider a third marriage. She had been married to Sir Alexander Korda, British film producer.

Before meeting Miss Oberon the count had been the constant companion of Italian Countess Nadina Visconti di Mondrone, 42-year-old divorcee who took an overdose of sleeping tablets in her Rome hotel January 31.

Cini flew from Italy in his twin-engined Cessna a few days ago to visit Miss Oberon, who has been vacationing on the French Riviera.

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (AP).—The American Legion today refused to write off China as lost and called on the United States to help the Chinese fight the Communists.

The Legion, in a resolution approved unanimously at its thirty-first national convention, appealed to the Chinese people to "throw out all foreign ideologies aimed at setting up totalitarianism domination . . . in the interest of a foreign power."

The convention voted an increase of 25 cents per capita in 1950 dues, effective October 1, to a total of $1.25 a year.

And the 2,500,000-member veterans' organization called for the United States Government's "immediate aid in forming" a Pacific regional union along the lines of the Atlantic Pact.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson told the convention the United States can insure permanent peace only by "keeping awake and preparing accordingly."

Johnson said criticism will not stop his efforts to unify the armed forces and provide defense at a price the Nation can afford.

The Cabinet officer last week ordered 135,000 civilian employes of the armed forces dismissed and more than 12,000 officers retired, saving 500 million dollars.

Johnson gave plain warning of more cuts to come.

"I am doing what my conscience tells me the people of America would have me do. And in doing that I shall make thousands of enemies," Johnson said.

"I promise you here, in this sacred gathering, that I shall not be distracted by the name-calling but I will stay on the job of unification within the economy of America."

"We Must Achieve Peace"

Johnson, former national commander of the Legion, declared that:

"We shall build our ramparts so strong that no aggressor will dare attack us. We must achieve peace—and we will achieve it.

"We will achieve it in the only way possible in this world of today—affirmatively—by unmistakable strength on land and sea and in the air."

The Defense Secretary, in what he described as his first public address as head of the new department, said Russia has been following since V-J Day the same course Japan took at the end of World War I.

But the United States "had not yet fallen completely asleep," he said.

"Now we are fully awake, grimly determined that history shall not repeat itself. Already we have gone a long way to correct the mistake of our demobilization stampede."

"Rounding Into Trim"

The United States Army, Navy and Air Force are "getting better every day, stronger and more efficient," Johnson said. "Moreover, they are rounding themselves into one team—a team that will make all our enemies stop, look and listen before attempting aggression across our tracks."

In its China resolutions, the Legion said it is impelled "to reject defeatism and abandonment of "China" to communistic aggressors."

The Legion also affirmed its faith in the United Nations; the Marshall Plan; the North Atlantic Pact.

"We are opposed to communism under any cloak," the Legion said.

"Appeasement of the aggressors constitutes surrender of our freedom on the installment plan."

Calling on the United States to spearhead a move for an international police force against aggressors, another Legion resolution urged North Atlantic Pact nations "to help in the strengthening of the U. N. charter so that eventually it will be the U. N. and not the North Atlantic countries that will police world aggressors."

Donovan Gives Warning

General William (Wild Bill) Donovan, wartime head of the Office of Strategic Services, warned Legionnaires the Balkans may again become "the danger point" that could lead to another world war.

Donovan said the Russians may reply to defiance by Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito by guerilla warfare that could set off a world-wide battle.

The candidates, all World War II veterans, are: George N. Craig, Brazil, Ind.; James F. Green, Omaha, Nebr.; Erle Cocke, jr., Dawson, Ga., and Donald R. Wilson, Clarksburg, W. Va.

The election is scheduled Thursday.

The candidates seek the post being vacated by Perry Brown, of Beaumont, Tex., a World War I veteran.

Brown told Legionnaires their biggest 1950 battle will be to preserve veterans' rights in the face of Government economy moves "at the expense of the veterans."

"Jolting Developments"

In his report on the 1948-49 Legion year, Brown said a series of "jolting developments" caught the disabled World War II veterans in "a squeeze play."

These are among the developments that must be guarded against Brown said:

"Slashes in Veterans Administration appropriations;"

"Reductions in VA personnel;"

"Proposals to merge all Federally operated hospitals which would mean the destruction of the VA, as an exclusive veterans' agency;" and

"Moves to dilute veterans' preference in Government employment."

Mrs. Norman I. Sheehe, 52-year-old grandmother from Rockford, Ill., today was the only candidate nominated for national president of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The nomination by 1300 delegates to the auxiliary's 29th annual convention assures her election Thursday.

Mrs. Sheehe will succeed Mrs. Hubert A. Goode, of Portland, Oreg.

Mrs. Sheehe is the wife of Dr. Norman I. Sheehe, Illinois physician. Her brother, Maj. Gen. John Taylor Lewis, is commandant at Fort Riley, Kansas.

Other officers nominated without opposition:

Mrs. Edna R. Heartt, Pasadena, Calif., (western division); Mrs. A. C. Halls, Garretson, S. Dak., (northwestern division); Mrs. B. D. Ward, Kingwood, W. Va., (central division); Mrs. Charles H. Mills, Belgrade, Me., (eastern division); Mrs. Raymond Connell, Paris, Ky., (southern division); all vice presidents, and Mrs. John B. McUown, Tucson, Ariz., historian, and Mrs. Ethel M West, Ketchikan, Alaska, chaplain.

The Auxiliary approved unanimously a resolution adopted by the American Legion national convention opposing the compulsory national health program.

Clarence E. Smith, 48-year-old Raleigh, N. C., businessman, was elected chef de chemin de fer (national commander) of the Legion's funmaking 40 and 8 society today.

FAR INTO THE NIGHT—Drum Majorette Dottie McClure, Oil City, Pa., still is going strong at the windup of the American Legion's 12-hour parade in Philadelphia. She was in one of the last units of the parade, which finished around 11 p. m. Tuesday

'Armed Forces Day' Named for 3 Services

Philadelphia, Aug. 31 (UP).—Defense Secretary Louis Johnson today designated the third Saturday in May to be "Armed Forces Day" to replace Army, Navy and Air Force Days.

Johnson told the American Legion convention here that President Truman had approved that particular day each year for a joint celebration by the armed services.

Army Day has been April 6, Air Force Day September 18, and Navy Day October 27.

A defense spokesman in Washington said the third Saturday in May was selected because the weather usually is good then and because it showed favoritism to none of the services. The spokesman said the date was selected by the joint chiefs of staff.

Six Veterans Close Historic Books of GAR

Indianapolis, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Taps sounded tonight for the Grand Army of the Republic.

Penland

The last faint tones mustered out the eighty-third and final encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Thursday these 6 of 16 survivors of the once huge Union Army of the Civil War go home.

They rode in their last parade tonight and waved a feeble farewell to a crowd of 50,000 cheering countrymen.

They tried one last time to sit erect and look like the soldiers they were 85 years ago at Antietam and Bull Run.

But they were old men, wrinkled and worn.

At a final symbolic "campfire," the feeble veterans passed up their last chance to spin their war yarns. The main spot on the program was set aside for their reminiscences.

In years past, they told and retold the same old war experiences.

But tonight, they took only 5 short minutes. A hush fell over the crowd gathered in a ballroom to hear them.

He Speaks of War

Only Albert Woolson, 102, Duluth, Minn., spoke of the war.

"I was a drum major in the great war," he said. "We had 12 snare drums and 12 fifes. Seven years ago at Grand Rapids, I played a tune. I'm out of practice now. Please excuse me."

Comdr. Theodore A. Penland, 100, Portland, Oreg., said he was "thankful to be in your preesnce."

Robert Barrett, 102, Princeton, Ky., said Indianapolis "showed us a good time."

James A. Hard, 108, Rochester, N. Y., said the women of the affiliated organizations helped make the last encampment a success.

"Hope We Meet Again"

"I'm glad to be here," said Joseph Glovese, 105, Pontiac, Mich. "I hope we shall all meet again."

One man was missing. Charles L. Chappel, 102 Long Beach, Calif., spirest of the six through the first half of the encampment, went to his room to rest after the parade. He couldn't make it to the campfire.

A chilly rain fell in the midst of the parade.

Yacht Tragedy

Body of D. C. Woman Found in Bay

Easton, Md., Aug 31.—The discovery of two bodies today solved the mystery of what happened to a Washington brunette who took a yacht ride with a Cambridge, Md., man just before the high winds hit Chesapeake Bay Sunday night.

A Coast Guard boat from Bloody Point Light Station came across the body of Miss Helen Stevens, 1328 Columbia rd. nw., Washington, just north of the spot where earlier today was discovered the floating body of Kenneth G. Lord, 32-year-old partner in a sheet metal business in Cambridge, Lord had invited Miss Stevens to take a spin on his yacht.

Frank Keglande, an auto mechanic, also of the Columbia rd. address, said a dress, shoes and a purse found in Lord's cruiser when it drifted ashore near Annapolis Monday belonged to Miss Stevens. The woman's body was clothed in blue shirt and brown trousers when it was found.

Gilbert Lonas, owner of the lodging house where Miss Stevens lived, said she moved in August 20. He described her as a "good looking brunette." He said she had a mother, Mrs. Norma McDuffie, living at Oxon Hill, Md.

Police said that Lord and a friend set out from Cambridge Saturday for a weekend cruise from the bay to North Beach, Md. Lord struck up an acquaintance with Miss Stevens when refueling the cruiser Sunday morning.

The tail end of the Florida hurricane, which hit the bay Sunday night, was thought to have struck the yacht while the two were at sea.

Cohen's Bookmaking Take Put as High as $6 Million

Los Angeles, Aug. 31 (AP).—Attorney General Fred N. Howser estimated that gambler Mickey Cohen's take from horse race bookmaking may be as high as six million dollars a year.

This was disclosed today in a speech before a civic club based on a detailed analysis of published information gained by police through microphones planted in Cohen's Brentwood home.

He indicated that at the present time, on the basis of published recordings, it would be difficult to convict Cohen of any crime except possibly bookmaking or violating the Federal income tax law.

Cohen was arrested at his home last night. The charge—disturbing the peace.

The arrest resulted from Cohen's cursing of policemen two weeks ago when they arrested his "business manager," Mike Howard, said Capt. Lynn White. Cohen's trial was set for September 15 and his bond of $100 continued at a hearing today.

'Open Door' In Raid Ruled No Coincidence

Deciding it was too much of a coincidence that a door swung open for police raiders, the United States attorney's office yesterday nolle prossed gambling charges against two men.

The men, Edward H. Trundle, 41, of 321 Madison st. nw., and Samuel E. Briles, 41, of 2809 15th st. nw., were arrested August 24 in a second-floor apartment at 1436 Park rd., nw.

After the arrests, Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, admitted the raid was made without a warrant. However, he said, as his men reached the front door of the apartment it very fortunately swung open and police saw $150 in $1 bills piled on a table.

On the basis of this evidence, Blick said, he and his men entered the apartment.

In asking the cases be nolle prossed in Municipal Court yesterday, the United States attorney's office said the raiders had entered the men's apartment without a warrant and thus "invaded their privacy."

Legend of Hitler Being Alive Seen Slowly Fading

By the United Press

Government officials said yesterday, with a sigh of relief, that it has been nearly a year since anyone has reported "seeing" Adolf Hitler.

United States Intelligence officials have long been convinced the fanatical Austrian, who started World War II 10 years ago today, is dead.

After careful investigation they have accepted as fact that Hitler committed suicide in a shell-torn bunker in Berlin, with his new bride Eva Braun by his side.

But the legend still persists, in this country as well as in Germany, that Hitler is alive and in hiding.

For years after the war, the FBI and Army and Navy intelligence were continually bombarded with "tips" that Hitler had been seen in this country.

But spokesmen said today no such reports have been received "in months."

FTC Charges Reissue, Sale of U. S. Booklets

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday charged a Washington publishing firm with republishing Government pamphlets and selling them as new books.

The commission also charged that the firm's name, the Public Affairs Press, also known as the American Council on Public Affairs, is "deceptive because it allegedly represents or implies that the corporation is in some fashion connected with the United States Government."

FTC gave the company, located at 2153 Florida ave. nw., 20 days to answer the complaint.

Morris B. Schnapper, executive secretary of the firm, said only about a dozen of the several hundred items on the publication list include material reprinted from Government publications.

In all cases, the Government agencies involved have encouraged re-publication to gain wider circulation, he said. Source of such material has always been stated somewhere in the firm's publications, he said. However, he added, the firm never thought it necessary to state who originally published the material, for example; the Government Printing Office, or a particular agency.

Mileage Rate In Road Deaths Hits Low Mark

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP).—The mileage death rate for the Nation's traffic accidents in the first half of 1949 hit an all-time low of 6.8

This was reported today by the National Safety Council. It was the first time the half-year rate has been less than seven deaths for each 100 million miles of vehicular travel.

"The goal set by President Truman in 1946 is in sight," the council president, Ned H. Dearborn, said. "At that time he asked that the mileage death rate, then about 12 deaths per 100 million miles, be cut in half."

The toll of actual deaths, however, rose slightly in July.

For July the death toll was 2850, an increase of 2 per cent from the 2790 July toll of 1948. July, January and April are the only months this year to record more deaths than last.

At the end of seven months the 1949 death total was 16,540, still one per cent under the 16,700 count at the end of July, 1948.

Attack Transport Plane Ready for Tests in a Month

The Air Force announced yesterday that its newest attack transport plane, the XC-123, will be ready for test flights in about a month.

The twin-engine ship, built by Chase Aircraft Co., Trenton, N. J., is designed to land attack troops in small fields near the front lines and then to bring in equipment and supplies to support them.

It has a wing span of 110 feet, is 77 feet long and 32 feet 8 inches high.

12 Dead, Many Hurt In Tokyo Typhoon

Tokyo (Thursday), Sept. 1 (AP).—Japan's worst typhoon in 11 years lashed the crowded Tokyo-Yokohama metropolitan area last night, killing at least 12 Japanese and injuring more than 100.

Authorities regarded the flood danger almost as great as in 1947 when typhoon-carried rains burst onto the Kanto plain and drowned 2000 persons in the Tokyo area.

Gusts of wind as high as 100 miles an hour smashed homes, knocked out communications and whipped Tokyo Bay into 50-foot waves.

The storm dumped more than 11 inches of rain into the rivers.

National police had reports of 27,000 homes damaged by the high winds.

The United States Army reported one American cut by flying glass and sent to a hospital.

United States military installations and housing areas were damaged extensively.

Several hundred men of an Air Force unit at Tokyo's Haneda airport were taken to concrete billets after the roof of their barracks was blown away.

Grant Heights, the Army's largest family housing project, was hard hit.

Ex-Woman Marine Becomes Bride of F. D. Roosevelt, Jr.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and bride after wedding

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (D.-Lib., N. Y.), today married Miss Suzanne Perrin, a slim, blonde socialite who did a hitch in the Marines during the war.

A simple ceremony in the bride's apartment home on East 66th st. joined the pair who met only last spring and had been engaged only six weeks. He is 35, she 28.

It was the second marriage for Roosevelt, who recently was divorced from the former Ethel duPont, and the first for Miss Perrin.

Roosevelt's mother, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt; her long-time secretary, Miss Malvina Thompson, and less than a score of other relatives and friends attended the wedding. The third son of the late President, recently elected to Congress from the Twentieth District here, had his brother, Elliott, as best man.

Troop Shifts Called Threats

pute over the State of Kashmir. Only the Communists, he said, profit from turmoil resulting from such disputes as those over the future status of Kashmir and Indonesia.

Acheson was asked whether he would give his views on Yugoslav developments, such as the reported shifting of Soviet armored units toward the frontier. He replied we are watching those developments very closely and added that some appear to be taking place with a sort of calculated publicity. He went on to say the whole business appears to be part of the war of nerves which has been going on for some time.

As to whether the United States, Britain and France are "doing anything positive about the Yugoslav situation," he replied that the three Ambassadors in Belgrade are continually in consultation, but said this did not go beyond what is normal.

The students detained by the Russians are Peter Sellers, 18, Radnor, Pa., and Warren Oelsner, 21, Oyster Bay, N. Y. They have been missing since July 29. Acheson said their continued detention by the Russians is illegal, outrageous and improper. He said it is true they had no passports and were improperly in the zone, but that they are young people who are doing no harm.

Bars Hostage Suggestion

The Secretary said nobody accuses them of being spies and therefore they should have been put over the border into the American zone.

He was commenting on a suggestion by an Army spokesman in Vienna that the United States should have used a Russian flier, Lieut. Anatole Barsov, as a hostage and traded him for release of the Americans. Barsov instead was released voluntarily to the Russians yesterday.

This Government, Acheson declared, does not do that sort of thing. We do not engage in holding people and trading them off against other people who also have committed no crime, he said.

The negotiations for an Austrian treaty, in progress at London, reach a deadline today. Without voicing an opinion on whether the long deadlock with Russia over terms still might be broken, Acheson said the difference between the Soviet position and ours seems to be the difference between putting impossible burdens on Austria and having a treaty under which Austria can develop as an independent country.

U. S. Workers Facing Sack Told of Jobs

Note to Federal employes facing the sack:

Go northwest — to Montgomery County. That, at least, was the theme developed yesterday by Lewis B. Sims, chairman of the county's personnel board.

Sims noted that "job opportunities are continuing to develop" in Montgomery, with a recruiting program going full steam.

"Displaced federalites," Sims said, could take their choice of such jobs as these: Rights-of-way agent, $4800-5760; chief of tree division, $3740-4488; chief of county buildings division, $3300-3960.

Applications for positions announced earlier should be filed by 5 p. m. Friday, Sims said. These include: Assistant County Attorneys, $5600-$7500 and $4000-$4800; supervisor of social work for Juvenile Court, $4000-$4800; Fire Marshal, $4800-$5760; probation officer, $2860-$3432, and assistant probation officer, $2640,$3168.

In addition, Sims announced, County Manager Irving G. McNayr has another plum for Government workers—the new post of head of the Department of Inspection and Licenses at a $6000 to $8000 yearly salary.

Information and employment forms are available at the Rockville Court House or at the County buildings in Bethesda or Silver Spring, Sims said.

$380 in Bogus Bills Seized on GI Here

Pvt. Robert Andrew Kopnicky, an ambulatory patient at Walter Reed Hospital, was in the guard house there yesterday after Treasury agents and Army officers seized him late Tuesday with 38 counterfeit $10 bills.

Five of the phony sawbucks had been passed before Kopnicky's arrest, three in Silver Spring and two in Washington, including one at the Capitol Theater.

A 21-year-old native of Stratford, Conn., Kopnicky was sent to the Forest Glen section of Walter Reed last May with a back injury. Between 20 and 30 other men throughout the country have been seized for passing similar counterfeit notes, according to Thomas Kelly, Secret Service field agent supervisor.

Kopnicky is being held on a technical charge of conduct prejudicial to the Army until court martial charges against him can be drafted.

The Provost Marshal at Walter Reed picked up the tip Kopnicky was trying to sell counterfeit money at the hospital. Treasury agents were notified, and the young private was arrested five hours later. He was offering fellow patients $100 worth of the notes for $55, Kelly said.

Kelly said 10 similar counterfeit $10 notes had been passed in the Washington area during the past two weeks. He said he was satisfied they had not been passed by Kopnicky.

Kopnicky told T-men he purchased the bogus bills in Stratford, but declined to reveal his source there. The tip that was his undoing came from a Forest Glen employe, the Army said.

Treasury men said no criminal charges would be lodged against Kopnicky after the Army court martial.

Kelly said the counterfeit notes could be identified. Of the $15,000 worth recovered in the Nation so far, all have had one or more of these distinguishing marks:

1. All were drawn on Federal Reserve Banks in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas or San Francisco.

2. Check letters and face-plate numbers, printed in black in the lower right-hand corner of the face of the note, are either C43, J16, J100, K40, K406 or K513.

3. Back-plate numbers, printed in the lower right-hand corner of the green side of the note, are either 7, 12, 19, 121 or 1207.

Kopnicky enlisted in the Army in July, 1948, at Bridgeport, Conn. After basic training he was assigned to the Ninth Infantry Division at Fort Dix, N. J. He entered Tilton General Hospital there May 13 and was transferred to Walter Reed five days later.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 31 (AP).—U. S. Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King today left aborad a nav ' plane fo" Washington after two months at the Portsmouth Naval Hospital. An aide said the Admiral had "improved steadily" and was planning to continue his convalescence at Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital. Admiral King suffered a stroke two years ago.

Bad Check Charges Hold 2

Two men who police say figured out an "easy way" to make money were held for further action in $1500 bond each on bad check charges by Judge Aubrey Fennell in Municipal Court yesterday.

The pair are James E. Patton, 36, of 3620 Jenifer st. nw., employed by the Federal Government as a painter, and Paul J. Donovan, 37, of 3118 Mount Pleasant st. nw., a gas station attendant.

According to police some 50 checks totaling about $500 were passed over a period of three months.

Police said Patton told them he took Donovan's identification cards, including his driver's permit, and used them to cash small, worthless checks.

Later, the two met and split the money, police said Patton told them. Patton confirmed part of this on the stand yesterday.

However, Donovan denied the story and said he had never seen Patton before.

Patton was held for a jury trial October 21 on nine counts of false pretenses. Donovan was held for action of the grand jury on a charge of forgery.

adorned with other views of Washington.

Enlarged from nine-inches-square to about four-feet-square, the picture hung there for about a week without much comment from anyone, said the restaurateurs. They declared they had not checked with anyone about using it, nor have they been approached since by any defense officials.

The Navy said the first they knew of it was when officials read it in the paper yesterday. No official verification has been made that this is the Banshee photograph and it seemed likely no official notice will be given to the incident.

All that a Navy spokesman would say was that the Banshee photographs still could not be released. There was no doubt, however, that this was a print of the suppressed film.

Czechs Warned To Spy on Friends

From Munich

Potent 'Voice' Station to Contact Reds

By the United Press

A 150,000-watt radio transmitter powerful enough to blast through some of the Russian jamming will begin carrying American broadcasts to Iron Curtain countries today, the State Department announced yesterday.

The transmitter, built at Munich, Germany, will operate on the medium wave length of 251 meters, 1195 kilocycles. It will blanket the Soviet zone of Germany, be highly effective in the satellite countries and, to a lesser extent, in Russia itself.

For 12½ hours daily, the station will relay Voice of America programs originating in the United States. At other hours, it will broadcast programs of the Armed Forces Network in Europe.

Six hours daily will be devoted to Russian language broadcasts.

Russian stations attempted to jam the transmitter when it was making preliminary tests, the department said. But the effort was only partially successful.

The announcement said many points in Europe reported "very good" reception during the test. The department conceded, however, that Russian jamming in general continued to be "extremely effective." Said Russia now is using more than 550 transmitters for jamming.

The transmitter will not be especially effective in Russia because most Russian sets receive only short-wave broadcasts. But many medium-wave receiving sets are in the satellite countries and the Soviet zone of Germany.

Permits to Ship Goods To Yugoslavia Increase

Commerce Department records showed yesterday that permits to ship goods to Yugoslavia have climbed sharply during the past 10 months as Marshal Tito's resistance to Soviet Russia has increased.

Yugoslav shipments to the United States have also increased, but at a much slower rate.

A department spokesman declined to attach any political significance to the development.

United States shipments were valued at only $400,000 last September but had jumped to $1,100,000 by November. They hit a peak of $2,600,000 in April, dropped to one million dollars in May and soared back to $1,800,000 in June.

Imports have gone up from $700,000 last September to $900,000 in June.

The Commerce Department authorized shipment of $9,538,000 worth of goods during the first three months of the year, but only $4,169,000 was actually shipped.

Prague, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The government-controlled Czech press today warned all citizens they might be imprisoned for failing to inform on any of their friends disloyal to the Communist regime.

The warning followed the government's announcement yesterday that a potential revolt against the state, "inspired by a Western power," had been crushed.

Newspapers emphasized that persons convicted for the alleged plot included those whose only crime was that they had known about it but did not report it to authorities.

Austrians Deny Reports Czechs Closed Border

Vienna, Aug. 31 (AP)—Officials of the Austrian Ministry of the Interior tonight said they had no knowledge of reports Czechoslovakia had closed its border with Austria.

Austrian customs officials at the border station of Haugsdorf said tonight border traffic between Austria and Czechoslovakia had been normal.

Marshall Plan Funds Division Agreed On

Paris, Aug. 31 (NYHT).—Representatives of western Europe agreed tonight upon the division of Marshall aid during the fiscal year 1949-1950, splitting up approximately $3,377,000,000 among themselves.

Britain, which announced it needs $1,518,000,000 is understood to have accepted 962 million dollars, 277 million dollars less than it was granted last year.

The most stubborn opposition to the division, which was prepared by Robert Marjolin and Baron Jean Snoy, of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, was reported to have come from Greece. Granted $144,800,000 last year, Greece won an increase to about 163 million dollars, but the head of the Greek delegation, insisting that a country at war had greater needs, fought for more.

The agreement must be approved by the Economic Cooperation Administration and the funds must be voted by Congress.

The actual figures were not made public tonight. It is believed they were reasonably close to the Marjolin-Snoy estimates that became known a few days ago.

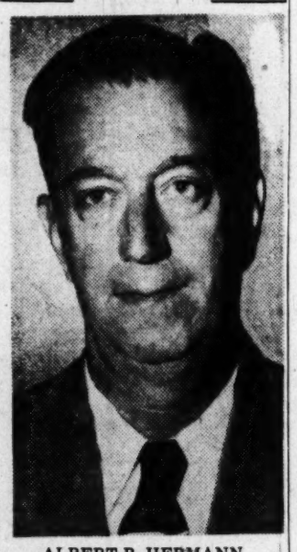
GOP Names Executive Director



ALBERT B. HERMANN
. . . new executive director

By the United Press

Chairman Guy G. Gabrielson of the Republican National Committee yesterday fired the "opening gun" in the party's 1950 election drive by appointing Albert B. Hermann of Miiltown, N. J., as the committee's executive director.

Hermann, onetime major league ballplayer and insurance executive, currently is administrative assistant to Senator Smith (R., N. J.), whom he helped elect in 1946.

During last year's presidential campaign, Hermann was New Jersey campaign manager of the Dewey-Warren ticket that rolled up an 85,000-vote majority for the GOP in that State.

Gabrielson said the appointment was the "first step toward building up the kind of vigorous, fighting organization capable of electing Republican majorities in the Senate and House next year."

"In selecting Albert Hermann for the tough job, I am well aware of his outstanding abilities," he said. "We now have a man qualified by practical winning experience at the grass roots of politics to cooperate with congressional, State and county leaders on the solution of party organizational problems."

Gabrielson, confident of a GOP victory next year, said Hermann's appointment was the "opening gun" of a campaign he believes can open the White House door to a Republican in 1952.

News Gag Case Goes To Supreme Court

Baltimore, Aug. 31 (AP).—Maryland today asked the Supreme Court to restore Baltimore's unusual gag rule on crime news.

Attorney General Hall Hammond urged the land's highest tribunal to upset a Maryland Court of Appeals ruling holding a vital section of the special news code is invalid.

Hammond asked the Supreme Court to step in on these grounds:

1. The exact questions raised in the prosecution of five radio stations under the rule have never before been considered by the Federal court.

2. The ruling by Maryland's highest court was not a very good application of Supreme Court decisions on similar questions.

The State insisted that the Criminal Court of Baltimore could punish the radio stations under its traditional powers of contempt, even if the special rule is invalid.

The Baltimore court has had for ten years a contempt code which prevented newspapers and radio stations from publishing many of the facts about a crime.

Maryland's Court of Appeals invalidated this publication sectio .

The purpose of the rule is to protect an accused man's right to fair trial, to assure him an impartial jury. The question laid before the Supreme Court now is the proper balance between this right on one hand and freedom of the press and of speech on the other.

Rebels Seize Two Cities In Bolivia

La Paz, Bolivia, Aug. 31 (AP).—The goverment tonight announced the fall of two more cities to rightist rebels who earlier had been forced to surrender their stronghold at Cochabamba.

The government confirmed the rebels had taken Yacuiba, an important oil center on the Argentine frontier, and Sucre, 250 miles southeast of La Paz.

This made four important centers in the hands of forces led by the National Revolutionary Party, which launched a revolt Saturday.

The others are Santa Cruz in the eastern Bolivian oil fields and Potosi in the tin-mining south.

Loyal forces that occupied Cochabamba today attacked Santa Cruz and Potosi.

Reds' Witness Denies Plans For Sabotage

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—A denial that American Communists would commit sabotage in the event of war with Russia was made today in the conspiracy trial of 11 Communist officials.

The statement was made by William Boyd Coleman, Cumberland, Md., thirtieth defense witness in the 33-week-old trial.

Coleman denied testimony for the prosecution by Charles Nicodemus, also of Cumberland, that a 1945 meeting in Coleman's home was concerned with plans to demoralize the American people if war should come.

Nothing of the sort was said at the meeting, Coleman told Federal Judge Harold R. Medina and the jury.

Coleman denied also that he filled out, that same year, a party registration card of which a photostatic copy was shown him. Neither, he said, did he ask anyone to fill it out for him.

Then Frank H. Gordon, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, showed the witness a photo copy of a party membership card with Coleman's name on it.

Coleman said he knew the person who signed th card but is not familiar with the signature. He said that nothing on the card is in his handwriting.

Howley Says U. S. Is Wise To Red Tricks

Berlin, Aug. 31 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Frank L. Howley looked back today at the Russians he dealt with for four years and warned them they would get nowhere continuing trickery in Germany.

Their persisting aim, he said, is to drive the Western Powers out and tear Germany apart.

Retiring as United States commandant of Berlin and preparing to go home next week, the former Philadelphia advertising executive told 100 Allied and German reporters:

"They will keep trying tricks and pressure as long as they think they can get away with it.

"My guess is that they won't get away with it and I would advise them not to try."

Howley said the United States is not willing to let bygones be bygones and added: "We will not forget the lessons we have learned."

Howley is being succeeded by Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former commandant of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

D. C. Board Would Keep 4-Cent Gasoline Tax

The District government will ask for continuation of the present 4-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax and "perhaps try to get another cent" when the tax authorization expires June 30, 1952.

Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox said the tax should be extended to finance city projects as well as to cover additional costs resulting from the $330-a-year increase for department employes and addition of the city sales tax on contractors' equipment costs.

Peron Hits at Free Speech

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The Peron government declared war on parrots and p arrakeets today. A 2-cent bounty on each pair of feet of the garrulous birds was offered by the Ministry of Agriculture on the grounds that they are highly destructive of crops.

Vachel Lindsay's Widow Discovers New Manuscripts

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 31 (AP).—The widow of Vachel Lindsay, the poet, said today an examination of his stored papers has revealed them as "the core of Lindsayana."

The original manuscripts and working drafts of most of the poet's works turned up in a large collection of material in a warehouse. Lindsay died here in 1931.

The widow, Elizabeth Connor Lindsay, said she also found six unpublished books of prose and poetry, considerable correspondence, and 50 diaries full of notes covering the years 1912 to 1931.

Mrs. Lindsay said the diaries and other items would be offered for sale.

U. S. Returns Deserter Pilot to Reds; Pirogov Hits Soviets

Picked Up Near Embassy

Lieut. Anatoly Barsov, the returning deserter, was picked up near the Russian Embassy on 16th st. nw., on August 17, by Federal officers. He was formally surrendered to Red army officials yesterday a few miles from the American airfield in Austria where he and his partner crash-landed their flight ship October 9.

Lieut. Peter Pirogov, the deserting partner, held a press conference in New York yesterday at the office of a publishing firm which will produce a book on his life.

The Russian Embassy disclosed in its public protest Tuesday that Barsov had been negotiating with that office for some time for return to Russia because he "repented" of his desertion and trip here.

As arrangements for his return neared completion, Barsov stayed at the Alturas Hotel, 1509 16th st. nw., a short distance from the embassy.

The protest said that Barsov disappeared after a visit on August 17, which was to be his final one before leaving.

A highly placed Federal official disclosed yesterday that representatives of three agencies, Immigration, Army CIC, and the State Department were waiting and arrested Barsov. There was no resistance, Barsov accompanying them without question when they tapped his shoulder. He was taken to Ellis Island for "security reasons," the State Department said.

However, The Washington Post learned yesterday that Pirogov also was picked up on 16th st., a few moments after Barsov was taken into custody.

Department of Justice, Immigration, and State Department Officials, although not denying it, were unanimously mum on this fact.

Pirogov, himself, confirmed it. He said he had written Barsov a letter, in care of the Russian Embassy here, asking a meeting in a 16th st. restaurant near the Embassy. He said he was intending to make one last effort to dissuade Barsov from leaving America.

At the restaurant, he said, he took along a friend as a precaution, and met Barsov, but their conversation was fruitless. A few moments later, he said, four men stepped up and arrested both him and his friend. They took him in an automobile to a hotel, he said, but released him in 30 minutes.

He was not asked if American authorities arranged with him to write the letter to Barsov, and the various Government authorities here were completely mum on the subject.

However, persons familiar with Federal investigative procedure pointed out two things. One is that Pirogov was released within 30 minutes, indicating that the arresting officers knew exactly where he stood in the case.

The other is that anxiety of the Russian Embassy to get Pirogov probably influenced that agency to send Barsov out on the street alone.

At his press conference yesterday, Pirogov said:

1. Barsov, on behalf of the Russian Embassy, used both bribes and threats to dissuade him from writing the book and persuade him to return with Barsov to Russia.

Useless For Propaganda

2. Barsov now is useless as a propaganda star for Russia, and will "die like a dog" within six months.

3. A "network" of Soviet spies enmeshed Barsov, engineered his decision to return to Russia, and watched conferences between Barsov and Pirogov.

4. The Russian Embassy wanted the two to return together to "tell the Soviet press of the realities and of our disillusionment in the United States."

5. Barsov threatened that in "five years or ten years, Pirogov will be back in the Soviet Union," whether he wishes to or not.

Landed In Austria

Barsov, Pirogov, and a Russian sergeant crash-landed their Red plane near Linz, Austria, the two officers asserting they had listened to "Voice of America" boardcasts and wanted to come here. They particularly wanted to see the State of Virginia, they said. The sergeant wanted to go back home and was allowed to do so immediately.

In February, the two fliers made their tour of Virginia as week-long guests of the Chamber of Commerce. Then they separated, Pirogov to settle in New York and write his life story, and Barsov to work as a carpenter's apprentice in Connecticut for a time. Both were on visitors' permits to enter the United States as political refugees.

In July, Barsov was contemplating a return home, and contacted Pirogov to persuade him of the same course, the latter said yesterday.

But at least three agencies, State Department security officers, Army Counter Intelligence Corps agents, and Immigration and Naturalization Service men, singly or together, were covering every move.

At several meetings in and around New York, Barsov tried to get Pirogov to join the return-to-Russia project.

Pirogov said Barsov offered him money if he would tear up his contract with the publishers.

"I asked him where he would get the money," Pirogov said. "Barsov said that was none of my business. But five minutes later, he told me he had been in touch with the Soviet Embassy."

Pirogov said he was convinced the embassy would have furnished the money. He said Barsov told him that the Soviet Embassy told Barsov that if he returned alone, he would "perhaps be put on trial."

"But if we both return and would tell the Soviet press of the realities and our disillusionment in the United States, the guarantee was, in that case, there would be no trial and no reprisals on the part of the Soviet government," he added.

Asked if he thought Barsov a Communist Party "plant," ordered to come to America for later propaganda work, Pirogov said he was certain Barsov was not.

"It's not possible that Barsov was a plant," he said. "They'd have chosen someone a little less stupid."

In their last conversation in New York, Pirogov said, Barsov made the threat, quoting the embassy, that he, Pirogov, would be returned in five years or ten, and said:

"I'll see, when you get back, how you swing in the air in Red Square in Moscow."

Pirogov said he replied that "within a year, I'll put a red cross on my memory for you, because you'll be dead."

Pirogov also said he knew that Soviet agents in this country were after him, but asserted he was not afraid of them and would "like to slap their faces" any time he got a chance.

Pirogov said he believes persuasion of Red agents influenced Barsov to go back. Barsov left a wife and child in Russia. Pirogov said is a bachelor, but left three sisters and a brother in Russia. He said he hopes they will not be molested or penalized for his defection, but "what I have done and am doing is more important than the welfare of my family."

The transfer of Barsov to Soviet authorities yesterday was made a week after he arrived in Austria. During that time, Army officers questioned him repeatedly on his intent. He maintained he wanted to return, they said.

Reaffirmed Desire to Return

Even on the way t ohte demarcation line between the United States and Soviet zones, the question was repeated three times, and each time Barsov reaffirmed his desire. He was met by Russian officers, who signed a receipt for him, loaded him in a large black car, and drove eastward.

The surrender of Barsov, however, brought repercussions.

An unnamed Army officer in the Austrian zone criticized the free return while Russians hold several Americans as prisoners. Asked about this at a press conference here yesterday, Secretary of State Acheson replied emphatically.

He said that the United States does not engage in that sort of thing. He said this country does not engage in the practice of holding people who have committed no crimes. Because of that principle, he said, the United States refused to use Barsov as a hostage for trading purposes.

Asthma Sufferers Look for Relief in "Glycolated Air"

Since Reader's Digest in April, 1948 published an article on the subject it is estimated that more than three million people have enjoyed the benefits of APS Glycol Vapor. Actually, this simple and harmless way of combating air-borne viruses is the result of over ten years of research.

The value of "glycolated air" as a method of preventing colds has now become so widely accepted that asthma sufferers are asking what benefits may be expected for them. A number of these persons, and also hay fever subjects, have reported being helped.

Although making no claims, the group of scientists responsible for the development have agreed upon an unusual money-back offer in order that physicians and asthma victims may avail themselves of a room-type APS Gylcol Vaporizer for test purposes.

Details of this offer and an informative booklet telling about APS Glycol Vapor and its uses will be sent free to anyone writing for them. Simply send your name and address to Health Equipment & Service Corp. 904 Bonifant St., Silver Spring, Md., or call SH. 0782. There is no charge. A penny postcard will do.

White House Kitty

The picture which Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan has drawn of himself as a kind of fence or carrier boy for political contributions is peculiarly distasteful principally because his collection depot was in the White House. Many a Postmaster General of either major political party has doubtless gathered in swag on a scale that would make the general's receipts seem mere petty cash. This has been, although President Truman must be credited with having put a stop to it recently, a traditional function of Postmasters General who were usually at the same time party chairmen; and we are not disposed to be overly squeamish about a system of financing said to be unavoidable in practical politics. But if the effect of the President's reform has been merely to transfer the harvesting of funds from the Postoffice Department to the White House, it must be reckoned altogether unfortunate. To give a check to the President's military aide comes distressingly close to giving it to the President himself.

There is another aspect of General Vaughan's political activities which make them seem especially unsavory. When contributions used to be made to Postmasters General, they were as a rule not obviously related to specific benefits conferred on the donors. The contributions received by General Vaughan seemed so plainly on a quid pro quo basis that it would almost be more accurate to call them payments. They were not very large payments, and the favors tendered in return were not very significant favors. Nevertheless, the relationship does have significance, or at least connotations, of an exceedingly ugly sort.

General Vaughan apparently conducted his office on a county courthouse level. His operations were for the most part picayune and conducted with offensive crudity. If he is to serve the President as collector for State or local congressional campaigns, it would be a great deal better to have him installed in some county office for that purpose. It seems patent that he has neither the wit to serve the White House in a political capacity nor the stature to serve it as a presidential aide.

Hoffman's Role

Paul Hoffman is back at his crowded desk after completing what strikes us as a most worthwhile mission to Europe. It was a delicate mission, for the stage had been reached in the Marshall Plan where some plain speaking had to be done, without, however, giving offense. Mr. Hoffman said his say everywhere with finesse as well as point, especially in Germany and Britain. In Germany, in rebuffing the anti-dismantling crusade and in emphasizing stability ahead of investment, he must have done something to discourage the perfervid nationalism which broke out during the recent electioneering. Nothing could have been more helpful to Dr. Adenauer in his quest for a government bent upon reconstruction and cooperation.

Everywhere Mr. Hoffman expressed his faith in Europe's ability to get out of its troubles, but bespoke work to warrant his faith, even in Britain, where the people are getting tired of reading and being lectured to about a crisis which they do not feel and for which they have not been prepared. It was only in London that he seems to have met a hostile press, but Mr. Hoffman was not discouraged, and he rang changes on his theme that a dollar deficit can be closed with a dollar income. His plea particularly to the British to bid for the American market, instead of either avoiding it or simply exposing their goods to it, and his assurances that there are plenty of dollars to be earned, must have left their mark—and, judging from the detailed publicity that his observations received, did so.

This is the kind of pushing and prodding that is called for from the administrator of the Marshall Plan. However, this country could do with some of the same medicine. It is quite true, as Mr. Hoffman told the Europeans, that last year the United States went a long way in the amelioration of its high tariff policy—thereby recognizing in part its position as a creditor nation. But it did not go far enough, nor did it demobilize in any way the "administrative protection" in the form of obstructionist customs procedure which at present inhibits the importer of goods—the goods that, in the last analysis, are the only satisfying means of paying for America's exports of goods and capital.

Mr. Hoffman was one of the founders of the Committee for Economic Development, a body set up to help in making the Nation's economic problems understandable. His work in that connection gave him a standing for economic statesmanship. This standing he has improved upon since he became head of ECA. Heaven only knows the people need that kind of leadership, and Mr. Hoffman is in a position to supply it, for the people have a respect for his common sense, and have enough of that commodity themselves to appreciate that a creditor has obligations to receive as the debtor has obligations to pay.

Steel Test

In effect the steel companies rejected the offer of the steel fact-finding board to mediate the dispute between the union and the industry by insisting that mediation be conducted on a company instead of an industry basis. As that would require some 30-odd separate mediatory efforts, the board, faced by this impossible task, has withdrawn its offer. Consequently the only hope—a slight one—of averting a strike depends upon acceptance by the steel companies and the union of the board's recommendations.

The companies are opposed to any settlement taking the form of an industry-wide collective bargaining pact. When testifying before the fact-finding board Enders M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corp., demanded to know whether the board would "in peacetime needlessly establish national bargaining patterns in the broad wage, insurance and pension fields, thereby firmly enthroning that arch foe of progress—inflexible, union-dominated, industry-wide and Nation-wide bargaining patterns." Other company witnesses stressed the fact that, despite the high general rate of industry profits, some companies were already in the red or had such small profits that further wage increases would spell bankruptcy. There was, in short, a manifest determination on the part of steel executives to resist attempts to establish an industry-wide wage pattern and even to break away from the practice previously followed of permitting the United States Steel Corp. to set the pattern for other companies in individual bargaining negotiations.

This attitude makes it all the more difficult to bring about a settlement of the present dispute by peaceful means. For the union is evidently just as determined to negotiate on an industry-wide basis as the companies are to avoid doing so. Although the fact-finding board has announced that it will give attention to the pleas of small companies against uniform application of its recommendations, it is obvious that it would be heading for trouble if it were to propose wage increases in some cases and deny them in others. The companies asked to pay higher wages would protest as well as the union whose members seek equal pay for comparable work.

Insistence on a rigid uniformity of wage schedules results in a general scale of wages either so high as to put out of business marginal high-cost concerns or sufficiently low to keep the marginal concerns operating, thereby denying to employes of more efficient concerns wage concessions that they might be able to obtain if negotiations were on a strictly company basis. Finally, there is always the question of the effect of industry-wide bargaining on prices and output. A strong union like that of John L. Lewis has been able to force mine operators to negotiate on an industry-wide basis. But the outcome has been higher coal prices and industry-wide restrictions on output to sustain those high prices and provide part-time work in marginal mines that would otherwise have to close down.

If the steel workers union should succeed in fastening on that industry a similar pattern of bargaining, the effect would ultimately be much the same as in the case of the coal industry. Consequently the public, as well as the steel companies and the steel workers union, has a vital interest in the outcome of this struggle over industry-wide as opposed to individual bargaining negotiations.

Siege Of Hawaii

With the refusal of the Federal District Court in Honolulu to restrain government operation of the docks, Hawaii's four-month-old longshoremen's strike has become a war of attrition. The court has forbidden the payment of profits from governmental operation to the stevedoring companies, and it has recognized the union's right to picket the docks. At the same time, by implication it has upheld the seizure law enacted by the Territorial Legislature. Meanwhile, union chieftain Harry Bridges has said that members will not work for the government. If the union intends to sit out a full test of the law's constitutionality, then the outlook is indeed dim.

Although governmental operation of the docks with nonunion stevedores has brought in some relief cargoes, business in the islands is severely crimped and unemployment is at an all-time high. Sugar exports are piled up, and export quotas to the mainland have been cut. On all counts the strike is a major economic catastrophe. An indirect result has been to stop dead all hope of Statehood during this session of Congress.

Certainly the strike has demonstrated a union control far more absolute than any alleged employer monopoly could possibly be. It would be foolish to maintain that many of the 2000 longshoremen involved had any part in a Communist plot to paralyze the islands. Nevertheless, the Bridges leadership of the International Longshoremen's Union has a definite Communist tinge, and it is an unusual coincidence that the Communists have been involved concurrently in similar strikes in Britain, Canada, Chile, and Finland. The longer the paralysis goes on, the more implication there is of union intent to prostrate not merely the employers but the whole Hawaiian economy.

Recalcitrance among the employers, of course, has contributed to the jumble. The employers declined to be bound in advance by the recommendations of the Governor's fact-finding board even though the union agreed. When the report was issued, both sides reversed their positions. The employers' fumble here is as nothing, however, compared with the shoddy evasion of responsibility by the Administration. President Truman has consistently refused to invoke the Taft-Hartley law and has passed the buck to the Governor and the Hawaiian Legislature. Now the Legislature is left in a legal quagmire.

The one hope for early settlement is in a new meeting of both sides called by Federal Mediation Director Ching in New York September 7. If the issue is really wages, then the fact-finding report offers a good basis for negotiation or even for arbitration if the scope is limited to wages. Beyond this, Congress itself ought to be thinking of ways to protect the public interest and prevent a repetition of the slow strangulation that a shipping strike inflicts on outlying possessions.

Geography's Tié

It was an inspiration to name Gordon R. Clapp, chairman of the board of directors of TVA, as head of the economic survey of the Middle East, for there is a magic about TVA which draws a constant stream of visitors to the Tennessee Valley from every country in the world. Mr. Clapp should be proof to the Arab states and Israel that the Administration is anxious to do its part to bring peace and prosperity to their ancient lands. His functions are narrowly defined as the study "of the economic problems in finding homes for Palestine Arab refugees."

President Truman helped to stress the political as well as the economic importance of the mission in the statement issued on the heels of the announcement. It was a significant declaration of policy in that the American approach to the Middle East is declared to be regional. This cannot be said, unfortunately, of other powers. The British have satellites in this region; the French, judging from reports after the coup that rid Syria of the ambitious Colonel Zaim, have been trying desperately to regain their former influence in Syria; and the Italians are rumored to have been playing politics in one or two Arab countries. All of them are engaged in the arms business. Mr. Truman talks about the Near East or the Middle East (isn't it time that the areas were redefined?) as an entity—to be regarded and treated with as an entity.

So the Middle Easterners should be, if common sense is to prevail. Attachments based on race or religion—as, for instance, the Arab League and the new Moslem grouping that Pakistan seems to be courting—only make for trouble, and seem to originate for this purpose. Geographical propinquity is the truest nexus that nature recognizes. The only ax that the United States has to grind in the Middle East is the ax of peace and prosperity. To that end, so well stated by the President, the mission under Mr. Clapp is dedicated.

It is to be hoped that the President's declaration of aim, together with the mission itself, will inspire the parties still deadlocked over peace negotiations at Lausanne "to bend their energies to constructive cooperation." Peace can be found by working together.

Hans Kindler

If Hans Kindler had contributed nothing else to Washington, the symphony orchestra he founded would remain a symbol of his devotion. Dr. Kindler, who died at Watch Hill, R. I., Tuesday, was the real father of the National Symphony, and he nurtured it through its turbulent years of infancy with zeal and an indefatigable confidence. But the orchestra was only one of Dr. Kindler's accomplishments. He took special pains to make music a living thing for children, and he certainly must be counted a key figure in the growth of popular interest in music here. Dr. Kindler was also a first-rank cellist, as well as a composer in his own right.

Opinions differed on Dr. Kindler's abilities as a conductor, and at the time he resigned from the National Symphony last March he was the center of a considerable controversy. It may be that his greatest talent was as a cello virtuoso rather than as a conductor attempting to call forth the best efforts of other musicians. In any case, many Washingtonians developed a real affection for Dr. Kindler. It is regrettable that he had to die so young.

QUAIL-CRY

It is the quails' cry, lonesome sound
From far-off bushes near the ground;
Sound of Autumn when the quails call,
Of frost, and dropping leaves and fall . . .
The covey rises with a bound
At some hunter's hunting hound
And flies with quick tight wings
Through little leafy rings
Like a magician's ball.

Like little bubbles gray they fly
And burst against the leafy sky,
And leave the forest quiet and queer
And Autumn, palpitating near!
When, suddenly, from fields nearby,
You hear that lonesome whistling cry
Defying dogs again
To break their fragile strain,
"Come here, come here, come here."

"The Peekskill Riot"

Of the many shocking aspects of the Fascist force and violence unleashed against the world-renowned singer, Paul Robeson, and the thousands who came to hear him at Peekskill Saturday, one of the worst was the fantastic editorial that appeared in The Washington Post on August 29.

"It is hard to say which side is more to blame," your writer has the gall to state!

Is it also "hard to say which side is more to blame" when a Negro is lynched in the South—or by a New York cop? Or when million of Jews were cremated in Germany and Poland by the Nazis—was it also hard to say who was to blame?

Is The Post—admittedly a very influential organ of public opinion—ready to sit back on a pedestal and look down at the rise of fascism in America with no more fundamental advice to the Nation than that "it is hardly the highest form of patriotism" to vilify, stab, stone and try to murder women and children?

Did not the influential Post learn beans from the lessons of Germany, Japan, Italy, Spain, Greece, etc., from the millions slaughtered in World War II in the name of "anticommunism"—or must the intelligent readers of your paper come to the conclusion that a liberal paper can't learn?

The world's millions who revere Paul Robeson as the greatest man in America have nothing but contempt for such a piece of drivel as your editorial on the Peekskill "Riot." How about a little moral leadership?

GAR Heirs

Perle L. Fouch's comment August 25 on the suggestion of the commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars, that the VFW assume the mantle of the dwindling Grand Army of the Republic, holds water. He omits to mention one insuperable barrier to such a plan, however; namely, that (there being just as many VFW men who are descended from Confederate soldiers as from Union soldiers) the VFW would also have to take over the functions of the almost totally extinct United Confederate Veterans, which once numbered hundreds of thousands.

No, no, VFW! You have enough to look after in matters applicable to the present without reaching back to the past and trying to take on political or other responsibilities that pertained exclusively to the soldiers of the sixties. Let the old fellows' activities die with them. They themselves will never be forgotten—no fear of that!

Hitler And The Pope

Is the Rev. H. S. Southgate (letter published August 29) really serious in his implication that the Pope condoned the fomentation and promotion of fascism and nazism and that he took no ecclesiastical action against their leaders?

My recollection of the activity and participation of the Pope in the affairs of World War II is that he was very forcefully and volubly opposed to the team of Hitler-Mussolini, their cohorts and their un-Christian acts, and performances; so much so that on several occasions the Nazi-Fascist threats to take over the Vatican appeared to be imminent.

Mr. Southgate's hypothesis that had the Pope opposed the Nazi-Fascist juggernaut as strongly as he recently condemned communism we might have been spared the horrors of World War II is the first declaration I have heard from a Protestant minister to credit the Pope with infallibility. Such an individual would have to be cloaked with this mantle to accomplish what the whole world was barely able to do with its full material resources and manpower.

Driver Examinations

Just another incident that proves the absolute necessity of home rule for the District:

As an employer, I had occasion recently to hire a man whose duties were to require the use of a driver's permit. His had been allowed to lapse for six months.

As of today he has lost three days work and I his urgently needed services due to the gross inefficiency of the entire examining system at the Municipal Center. Regulations require that after six months lapse the driver is required to take another examination.

Never are there more than three examiners, forcing applicants to commence lining up earlier than 6 a. m. On arrival, if not one of the first few, he will be forced to wait from two to seven hours for a roadtest. A time is quoted on each individual's card, yet it is the rule rather than the exception for examiners to drop one or two hours behind schedule. In my case it proves impossible to release my employe for more than an hour or so.

The situation is the worst example of bureaucracy that I have ever encountered.

Feldman's Record

As a civilian worker in the office of the Quartermaster General, I can be loyal to the Quartermaster Corps—and to General Feldman, too.

Even though I can only speak for myself, I am sure my feelings are shared by many others, and I feel that suspension these last weeks, in itself, has crucified General Feldman enough and I would like to see him again restored to duty. A more humane man never existed. He isn't like some of the officers in the Pentagon, or even in our own office, whom we civilians know only by name, whom we never see, or who never see us. I never passed him in the halls that he didn't have a smile and a greeting, even though I scarcely know him.

While I can understand the quick action in suspension by the Army General Staff, I think it has been severe enough. I doubt if there is a Senator or Congressman or member of the General Staff, who, if he examines his own soul, can cast the first stone, or who can show 38 years (a lifetime) of more meritorious service. Double Pay

Veteran's preference makes Government top-heavy with former servicemen who hold reserve status. It is morally wrong to receive double pay for a tour of duty that qualifies for additional benefits. Literally thousands of reserve personnel in Government service are receiving this double gratuity. It is not available to taxpayers burdened with Government payrolls. Neither should it be available to those supported by the taxpayers.

When a Government employe goes on temporary active duty as a reserve component, he should be given the option of the more desirable emolument. Under no circumstances should taxpayers be paying double salaries to their servants.

"Acheson And Judd"

Your August 29 editorial, "Acheson and Judd," placed its author squarely in the category of men who are not fully acquainted with the facts of a case and yet insist upon telling the world what it is all about.

The idea of "this civilian-run country" having to accept military advice is sneered at in your editorial, yet its author apparently did not give much consideration to the rights of the taxpayer who, in 1945, had contributed trustingly for many years to the maintenance of a military intelligence machine, the duties of which were to advise the Nation and its leaders of any potential menace to our security.

The military report that Representative Judd claims our diplomats acted against was in the nature of an intelligence report and, as such, a statement of facts rather than an attempt to influence our policy-makers. Your glib phraseology designed to ridicule information of military origin, therefore, does not impress anyone who knows the inside story.

Nor can I believe your story that we did not tell the Chinese of "the bad work at Yalta" out of fear that the Japanese would promptly be informed. It is true that there were leaks in the Chinese government, as there were in all other governments at war, yet it is going too far to contend that we could not trust information on the Yalta deal to the generalissimo himself. The inference that he or his henchmen would have promptly relayed it to the Japanese is absurd.

On page 116 of the "White Paper" we read that "From the generalissimo's reaction it was apparent that the Russians had already made the Yalta Agreement known to him." The excuse for not informing Chiang Kai-shek is equally absurd, for it would inevitably suggest that the Russians—who themselves were villainously involved in the deal—trusted the Chinese more than we did. It, furthermore, revealed the fact that the State Department was and still is unaware of the generalissimo's source of information when told of the Yalta deal by Ambassador Patrick J. Hurley.

In this connection it would perhaps, be appropriate to quote briefly from Frank C. Hanighen's August 10 issue of Not Merely Gossip, a Supplement to Human Events:

"According to Chinese sources no longer in this country, Mr. Roosevelt himself had no such elaborate inhibition as the State Department. On his return from Yalta, in March, he called the Chinese Ambassador to the White House and disclosed to him the sell-out of the richest Chinese province. From this we may draw several conclusions: (1) That the matter was heavily on the dying President's conscience; and (2) that he thought so little of the State Department that he did not bother to tell any of its officers."

Young Vs. Old In Politics

By Malvina Lindsay

No Meeting Ground

THIS IS a time of contrasts. The young are meeting and talking about what ought to be done in the world. The old, or at least the middle-aged and elderly, are doing the little that is being done—in cabinets, legislative bodies, conferences, committees.

One national youth conference is on in this country. Two others, of world-wide membership, have just concluded sessions in Europe. Other smaller, specialized ones are in session.

The ample-girthed men who run the show in the American Congress and in most other citadels of power probably are not even aware that many of tomorrow's leaders are or have been in mental training camp. It will be a long time before these young men and women will be in spots to make their ideas felt. Perhaps by then their ideas will have changed—become "sounder," more down to earth.

Nevertheless, part of the hopes, plans, ideals voiced this month at Brussels, Amsterdam, Urbana, Ill., will ultimately find their way into action in Washington and elsewhere. It may be sooner than we think, sooner than the usual cycle of change. For there is everywhere a feeling of new sap rising, and in this country evidence that education, forums, town meetings, community training in citizenship are beginning to pay off in both youths' and women's increased activity in politics.

MUCH OF this is still under the surface. The many forceful and conscientious young representatives sent to the Eighty-first Congress weren't able to break the deadlock of inaction and reaction of that body. But their courageous efforts and faithful service were not lost. And—one ventures to predict—many will come back to fight another day. Also coming up in the State legislatures are some very young men and women who have ideas and determination.

That is why the solid men in the seats of the mighty might well listen to what youth is saying on its present rostrum, even though to some it may appear "half-baked, visionary, idealistic."

Some clews to what American youth is thinking come from the second annual congress of the United States National Student Association (known as a moderate group of a wide type of affiliation) now in session on the University of Illinois campus. For here are representatives of more than a million students from 350 colleges and universities.

This group especially wants more higher education for American youth. Hence it is discussing a "civilian GI bill" to aid needy students—a suggestion that may produce more goose pimples on those jittery about a "welfare state." The main goal of this group is to "secure for all people equal educational rights and opportunity regardless of race, religion, political belief or economic circumstances." It also has taken a stand for greater academic freedom, less discrimination and segregation of minorities on campuses, and for promotion of friendship with foreign students.

MEANWHILE in Amsterdam Student Federalists from 30 countries are attacking the ogre of war, not by the negative pacifist approach of students of the 1930s but by practical plans for promoting a Federal Union of Western Democracies to hold the line until world federation can be achieved.

American youths returning from the newly organized World Assembly of Youth in Brussels came home fired to do more at the grassroots in influencing legislation and political decisions. No resolutions were passed at this meeting. As one delegate explained, youth frankly realizes that it is not consulted when decisions are made in high places. This being the case, the realistic approach is to seek a voice in them through the representative process, at the polls and in molding public opinion.

In all these meetings, young men and women talked and argued about many questions. There were the natural splits in opinion. No one could claim that these groups had any monopoly on the ideas of tomorrow. In fact the foremost exponent of Federal Union in this country is the 74-year-old former Supreme Court Justice, Owen J. Roberts. Nor would anyone hold that those who make the decisions about world affairs should not have experience, background, even years. But somehow the gap between an important senatorial committee in action—or inaction—and the voice of a youth assembly seems too wide for the good of the Nation.

Soviet Visit

If we sincerely want to reach a mutual understanding with the Russians, why couldn't our Government broadcast an invitation to their leaders to pay us a social visit? Let them savor the flavor of our hospitality—at the P[illegible]er Rouge plant, Radio City [illegible]e Hall and the Bar Y ranch. Similarly, some of our leaders would be disabused of misconceptions as to what makes a Soviet citizen tick if they would tour the U. S. S. R. Such an exchange of visits would not only be a dramatic gesture of friendship between the Russian and American people, but it should also lay the ghost of warmongering!

Flaws In The Middle Income Housing Bill

By the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady
Secretary, National Conference of Catholic Charities

NOW THAT the low-rent public housing program for low-income families is getting under way on a large scale, serious consideration is being given to the problem of securing adequate housing for middle-income families. Unfortunately there seems to be some confusion as to just what are the requirements for housing for the middle-income group.

The editorial in The Washington Post of August 26 dealing with this subject defines the middle-income group as those families which are in the $2000 to $4000 income bracket. This is certainly a good definition; it includes about 40 per cent of all American families.

The basic question is: How much can the families in this income group afford to pay for their homes? There are some widely accepted and simple ratios which give us the answer to this question.

Families in the $2000 to $4000 group can afford rents of not more than $40 to $80 a month, or an average of $60. These are maximum figures since they imply that 25 per cent of the income dollar will be spent for shelter, whereas the socially desirable expenditure for shelter should be not more than 20 per cent. Assuming that under ordinary financing terms, a family should pay not more than twice its annual income in buying a house, middle-income families who wish to buy their own homes can afford to buy houses selling for not more than $4000 to $8000, or an average of about $6000.

YOUR editorial describes the bill (H. R. 6070) passed last week by the House as being a good middle-income housing bill. The editorial so describes the bill, even though the section relating to direct loans for veterans, which the editorial favors, was deleted from the bill as it passed the House.

The test of whether H.R. 6070 is a good middle-income housing bill is whether it meets the requirements stated above. If it will provide adequate rental housing with rents averaging not more than $60 a month and if it will provide sales housing at selling prices of not more than $4000 to $8000, it is a good middle-income housing bill. My concern is that, unfortunately, the bill does not meet these objectives.

The provisions of the bill relating to FHA insurance of mortgages of sales housing make it clear that except for a relatively small amount of sales housing in rural nonfarm areas, the minimum selling price for the sales housing provided in the bill will be $7000. Even this figure may be increased to $8000 in any geographic area where the FHA commissioner finds that cost levels require the higher amount.

It is true that this amount is the maximum allowed by FHA if the mortgagor is to receive the best insurance terms, but experience has shown that the maximum figure in the legislation is actually the minimum in practice. Certainly, none of the mortgage insurance provisions of the bill aimed at reducing the cost of sales housing below present highly inflated figures.

The only other significant provision of the bill provides for FHA insurance of cooperative housing developments at 4 per cent interest for a 40-year amortization period. According to the estimates of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, monthly payments or rents in such developments would be in the neighborhood of $90 to $95. Even assuming that these figures are too high and that additional savings of $15 a month could be made by reducing vacancies to a minimum and by a maximum of tenant maintenance maximum of tenant maintenance, would still be in the neighborhood of $75 to $80 a month.

IF WE are realistic about this bill, it is perfectly clear that it can provide housing for only the very top level of the middle-income group, but would leave the great majority of middle-income families still untouched by housing legislation.

We have learned to be realistic about meeting the housing problems of low-income families. We recognize that low-income families can afford to pay only about $30 a month for rent, and the low-rent public housing program operates on a down-to-earth basis in full recognition of that fact.

We must display equal realism in meeting the housing problems of middle-income families. We must somehow achieve rents or monthly payments of around $50 to $60 a month.

This problem has been given serious consideration by all of the major labor and veterans' groups, as well as many other public interest organizations, and some of the members of Congress who have had a foremost part in shaping housing legislation in recent years. They have all come to the conclusion that only by reducing the interest rate and extending the amortization period will it be possible to build housing that moderate-income families can afford. That is why Title III of Senator Sparkman's Bill (S. 2246) as reported out by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, provides for direct Federal loans to cooperative and other nonprofit housing groups at 3 per cent interest, and for an amortization period of 50 years.

We believe that this program represents a realistic approach to middle-income housing. We recognize that in some respects it is a new approach. As a number of supporters of this program have pointed out, the new approach lies not so much in the direct Federal loans or even in the low-interest rate, but in the espousal by these organizations of the cooperative approach as being the solution to the housing problem for large numbers of middle-income families.

This is admittedly a new departure, but one which we think has every chance of success. The fact that the labor and veterans' groups are solidly behind this program represents in itself a very strong indication that if given a chance it will succeed.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Small Potatoes

IN THE past, congressional committees have put on some gaudy spectacles. Great reputations have been torn to shreds and left on the floor of the committee room.

Childs

The most spectacular certainly in recent memory was the investigation that took its name from the formation on a Government oil reserve known as Teapot Dome. Millions were at stake in Government oil that had been set aside for the national defense.

A member of President Harding's Cabinet, Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall, was convicted of taking a bribe of $100,000 and sent to the penitentiary. For his work as a reporter on that case the late Paul Y. Anderson of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch received a Pulitzer prize which he richly deserved.

Working in close cooperation with O. K. Bovard, a great editor, Anderson helped to trace the "hot bonds" that led to the bribery charge. It was a piece of painstaking and resourceful reporting that served the public interest.

A few years later Ferdinand Pecora, now a justice of the Supreme Court of New York, conducted for a Senate committee a searching investigation into the high finance of the late twenties. Men who had put together fantastic financial empires were paraded across the witness stand and subjected to Pecora's devastating examination.

BY CONTRAST the 5 per cent investigation has the look of a shabby roadshow. A great many accoutrements of publicity have been added since the day of Teapot Dome—radio transcripts made in the hearing room, television, newsreels. All these were on hand in the packed committee room when Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan took the witness stand.

But instead of magnifying the story they seemed to dwarf it. You had the impression of looking through a very powerful glass at tiny figures squirming and wriggling like worms in a can. This great apparatus of publicity seemed to underscore the squalid and petty nature of the inquiry.

It may be that in its very pettiness it is more disagreeable—some would say more reprehensible—than Teapot Dome. The country has an instructive example of principals who seem to feel there is nothing wrong about using official influence for private favors.

Vaughan has now testified under oath that he was never paid any fee or part of a fee either directly or indirectly. That confirms President Truman's belief that his military aide has never taken money for favors done. Vaughan also denied that he ever tried to intimidate Herbert C. Hathorn, a Department of Agriculture employe, in order to get Hathorn to act favorably for a molasses company that had violated OPA regulations.

THERE IS no doubt that Vaughan has embarrassed the President. The headlines made by the investigation have been one of the irritants of a hot and troubled summer that has more often than not seen the White House on the defensive in a contest with the Republican-Southern Democrat coalition in Congress.

The President has a sense of loyalty that is almost primitive in its depths. Vaughan was intensely loyal to him when things were blackest and so he will not desert his bumptious friend when he gets into hot water.

In a little while, when the present headlines have been forgotten, it is believed at the White House the President will find a distant and relatively obscure assignment for his military aide. There is some hopeful thinking among those who recognize Vaughan's potential for creating embarrassment about such distant outposts as Guam, Alaska and the Virgin Islands. Certainly the general's usefulness to the President, whatever it may have been in the past, would seem to have been impaired.

As an alternative, one of the President's—and Vaughan's—rich friends may find a berth for him. Edwin W. Pauley, whose name has come into the investigation, has far-reaching interests and he could easily find a spot for a friend.

Everyone who knows Washington at close range knows that the 5-percenters who have come into this inquiry are for the most part the little fellows. The big operators are the lawyers—out of both the Old Deal and the New Deal—who rarely go into a courtroom. Their specialty is influence and knowing the right people and they make millions from it. An investigation that really dug into this phase of the influence industry would hit pay dirt.

In Defense Move

Pact Council Will Meet Here Sept. 17

By The Associated Press

The State Department last night signaled the first step toward creation of the long-awaited North Atlantic defense council to bind together the common defenses of the United States, Canada and 10 western European nations.

The department said it has been agreed that the first session of the general council established by the North Atlantic Treaty will convene in Washington September 17.

"It is expected that the foreign ministers of all the treaty nations will attend," the brief announcement said.

The agreement marks the first move to build up the actual machinery of the defense alliance and put it into operation. President Truman formally put the treaty into effect a week ago at a simple White House ceremony.

The State Department gave no details as to the general council's agenda, but it is regarded as certain that top priority will go to these major points:

1. Establishment of a military defense council and selection of a single commander to work out a common defense strategy for the 12 treaty nations.

2. Plans for dividing upwards of one billion dollars in American arms aid which President Truman has asked Congress to approve for western Europe.

In addition, the foreign ministers are expected to discuss the latest hostile rumblings from Moscow, particularly Russia's angry blasts against Marshal Tito's Yugoslavia.

Editor Assails Proposals for Press 'Police'

Minneapolis, Aug. 31 (AP).—Newspapermen's "character, understanding and allegiance to their responsibility—rather than policing commissions or enforced rules of conduct—are the best guarantors of continued self-improvement of the press," a prominent editor said today.

B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, predicted a "dismal end" for an agency to appraise the press such as suggested by the Hutchins Commission on freedom of the press.

McKelway addressed a national session of journalism educators.

He reviewed reports of the Hutchins commission, headed by Robert M. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, and the British Royal Commission on the press.

"Implict in the proposals of both the Hutchins and the Royal Commission reports, no matter how clothed they may be in the fetching language of the beneficient reformer, is the idea of a policeman," he said.

"And the policeman idea is a threat to freedom of the press," he said, "for freedom of the press means freedom for the worst as well as the best of its practitioners; freedom for 'the thought we hate' as well as the thought we approve. . . .

"The most unassailable position for the defense of a free but privately owned newspaper press is to make it the most trustworthy guardian of that common property of the American people—the accurate, uncolored news of the day," McKelway said.

"Never were there so many currents of thought among newspapermen directed toward self improvement," he said, adding that newspapermen "generally approve" of the ASNE board of directors recent investigation of certain newspaper practices in Illinois.

McKelway called the association of Associated Press Managing Editors "one of the best organized attempts by competent newspapermen to watch, criticize and report upon the daily performance of the press as seen through the wire report of the Associated Press."

McKelway spoke to a joint session of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism, Association of Accredited Schools and Departments of Journalism and the American Society of Journalism School Administrators.

Sicilian Bandit Wants People To Decide Fate

Palermo, Sicily, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Salvatore Giuliano, the "bandit king of Sicily," demanded today that the government decide his fate by plebiscite of the Sicilian people.

He served a 15-day ultimatum on the government saying he either must be recognized as a live and free hero or a dead and dishonored bandit.

He swore he would obey the wishes of the electorate and "if you want the phenomenon of Giuliano to disappear, let us place it before the Sicilian people by the means of a votation."

Giuliano was a minor officer in the "Voluntary army for Sicilian Independence" which sought to end Italian rule over the island immediately after the war.

Giuliano's bandits now virtually are holding at bay two full regiments of Italian security police including paratroops and light tanks. Thus far the gang has killed more than 80 officers.

The bandit made his proposition to the government in a flowery letter, dated August 27, to the Palermo newspaper Ora del Popolo.

D. C. Amendment Dropped

An amendment by Senator George (D., Ga.), further exempted retail establishments which make or process the goods they sell while another by Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), exempted firms retailing building materials for farm or home construction.

Cotton gin employes and workers in small contract telegraph offices also were exempted.

Despite support from Southern and farm State Senators, every effort to soften or delay application of the 75-cent minimum was beaten down.

In the rush to pass the bill by nightfall, many amendments were not pressed.

No vote was asked on amendments by Senators Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Kefauver (D., Tenn.) making the present minimum wage law apply to the District of Columbia. Senator Humphrey said he would ask the Senate District committee to approve the amendments as a separate measure.

Ellender Fears Depression

Senator Ellender (D., La.) led the Southern drive to substitute a sliding scale for the 75-cent floor and lost in three separate tries.

Ellender argued it might "bring on a depression" to jump suddenly to the new rate. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) as well as Pepper took the floor in opposition. Taft said the 75-cent figure was "a reasonable minimum."

Ellender's first amendment, fixing a 65-cent minimum through 1950, and thereafter hitching a 55 to 75-cent sliding scale to the cost of living, was rejected 51 to 26.

Ellender then proposed a flat 70-cent minimum wage. This lost on a voice vote.

He next offered a 65-cent rate, with industry committees empowered to raise or lower it. This was beaten, 51 to 24.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) proposed a three-year step-up to the 75-cent rate for firms employing fewer than 50 workers. He said it would "soften the blow" or small concerns, and avert lay-offs that might otherwise occur. But the Senate voted it down, 54 to 20.

Freer Trade For Europe Gets Backing

Strasbourg, Aug. 31 (NYHT)—The Economic Committee of the European Consultative Assembly today agreed on a report calling for convertibility of European currency and creation of a preferential trading area to embrace western Europe, the British Dominions and dependent overseas territories of European countries. It asked also that the United States reduce its tariffs.

The report, to be debated by the Assembly Friday, in effect asks Europe to say to America: We want to break down trade and currency barriers within Europe and its overseas territories; we still want the right for the time being to be protected economically against the world; and we would like the United States to lower its own tariff barriers and to invest capital in our territories.

The report also asked a world economic conference.

U. S. Wants to Ease Curbs on Imports

By The Associated Press

The Administration wants to make it easier for British and other foreign goods to enter the United States so Britain can earn more of the dollars she badly needs.

Government officials who reported this yesterday said Administration attorneys are drafting legislation to simplify and modernize customs regulations.

The present plan is for President Truman to ask Congress for these changes as soon as it acts on United States membership in the proposed International Trade Organization.

British Basic 'Freeze' Set

London, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—The General Council of the Trade Union Congress, powerful element in Britain's Labor Party, today ordered a flat "hold-the-line" policy on wages, profits and prices.

The governing body of the country's biggest trade union organization, which has eight million members, rejected proposals to increase wages and to reduce profits and prices, declaring, "the inevitable consequences . . . would be disastrous."

The report was released for the annual convention of the congress, opening Monday at Bridlington.

The report placed full responsibility on the individual trade unions for carrying out the hold-the-line order.

Britons Sail For Parley

retary of State Acheson in Washington.

Acheson told his weekly news conference he had heard of no such plans—but the money conference would offer the opportunity to go over the Balkan situation.

Bevin and Cripps have with them 13 aides and experts and the 20,000-word basis of the plans they will lay before American officials.

Provisions of Plan

Authoritative sources said the plan provides that:

1—Britain will cut government spending, try to increase factory production without raising export prices and make a more aggressive bid for dollar customers.

2—Britain will ask in return that America lower tariffs and guarantee the sterling area a market for dollar-earning raw materials—such as rubber and tin—for a fixed period at fixed prices.

3—Formation of an Anglo-American economic council. A sort of high command of finance and trade, it would see that Britain produces the kind of goods that will sell for dollars.

Anti-Red Riot 'Horrible' to Mrs. Roosevelt

New York, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today that she thought the Peekskill, N. Y., riot was "horrible," and that, although she disagrees "violently" with Paul Robeson, she understands what motivates his bitterness.

The former First Lady's comments on the Peekskill affair were made aboard the liner Stavangerfjord as she bade farewell to a group of 21 Negro students and three faculty members from Howard University, Washington, D. C., who sailed for Norway to present a number of plays in the Scandinavian countries.

Mrs. Roosevelt was asked what she thought of the riot.

"I think it was horrible," she said. "I think people can walk out, and I would walk out, but I don't think there should have been a riot. I would hear Paul Robeson sing, but I'd leave if he were using his art as political propaganda in making speeches for communism as he has done."

Howard University asked Mrs. Roosevelt to see their dramatic group off.

Dewey's Office to Hear Riot Probe Demands

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 31 (U.P.).—An official in the office of Governor Thomas E. Dewey will meet with a representative of the Civil Rights Congress to hear demands for a thorough State investigation of the recent anti-Communist riot in Peekskill and for publication of names of New York State members of the Ku Klux Klan.

Lawrence E. Walsh, assistant counsel to the Governor, today announced he had agreed to discuss the matter with Harry Philo in the counsel's office Thursday. Philo is Albany County secretary of the American Labor Party.

The meeting will take place shortly before a scheduled civil rights march on the State Capitol.

Celler Discounts Value of Any Arab DP Testmiony

By the United Press

Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) told a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee yesterday it would get only "confusing" testimony if it questions Arab spokesmen about a House bill to "liberalize" the displaced persons law.

Celler, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said he is surprised that the Arabs have the "hutspa" to offer their testimony. "Hutspa" is a Hebrew word meaning "unmitigated audacity."

Committee Counsel Richard Arends informed Celler that the scheduled witnesses are not Arabs, but persons who have done relief work among Arab refugees of the Israeli war. Arends said they would appear at the direction of Committee Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.).

London Bank Box Yields Gem Cache Laid to Theft Ring

London, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Scotland Yard disclosed today it had raided a safe deposit box crammed with loose diamonds and emeralds and said this might be the "treasury" of a gang of international jewel thieves.

Detectives said a "conservative estimate" of the gems' worth was "anything up to" $200,000.

Scotland Yard also found gold bullion valued at $40,000—the settings of jewelry which had been melted. Insurance agents on the trail of the gang which robbed the Aga Khan early in August of $685,000 in jewelry will be permitted to view the cache.

D. C. Clearings Set New Peak For August

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington bank clearings soared to $329,676,555 in August, a new record for the month and a gain of 13 per cent over the same month last year.

Cumulative figures, reported yesterday by the Washington Clearing House Association, showed $2,521,087,555 in check transactions for the first eight months. This was an all-time peak for that period and a gain of more than 133 million dollars over the same period last year.

Except for January and April every month so far this year has shown a gain in clearings, reflecting the continued high level of general business activity in this area.

Hitler Started World War II 10 Years Ago

Berlin, Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Ten years ago tonight the goose-stepping legions of Adoph Hitler assembled on the Polish border for the dawn march into the most destructive war in history.

At exactly 5:45 on the morning of September 1, 1939, the "Hellschreiber" ticker of the official German news agency, DNB, in the Berlin bureau of the United Press, began tapping out a proclamation to the German armed forces, ending with the signature "Adolf Hitler."

"The Polish state," it said, "has refused the peaceful settlement of our relations as neighbors for which I have striven, and has instead appealed to arms.

"The Germans in Poland are being persecuted with bloody terror. There remains for me no other means of putting an end to this madness but from now on to meet force with force."

Struck Without Warning

Two German army groups under Colonel-General Werner von Bock and Colonel-General Gerd von Runstedt smashed across the Polish frontier in a broad arc, swept through the famous Danzig Corridor and menaced Warsaw.

Ahead of the motorized Nazi spearheads roared the Luftwaffe's Stuka divebombers, blasting the Polish airfields and destroying the entire Polish air force without warning or previous declaration of war.

For six years Adolf Hitler had prepared for this war and now he had it.

Late in the evening of August 31 Hitler had summoned Polish Ambassador Josef Pipski and handed him an ultimatum with impossible terms which he did not even have time to transmit to Warsaw.

The handful of Hitler's disciples who planned World War II and managed to survive its end might mark the tenth anniversary of its outbreak Thursday. But they won't discuss it.

Spandau Prison, where Rudolf Hess and his six partners in war crimes are confined, probably is the only place in the world where there is no talk of war.

Conversation is not allowed except when one of the 32 Allied guards specifically permits one Nazi to talk to another in line of work. They are allowed no newspapers or magazines of any kind.

The former top Nazis will rise at 6 a.m., clean their own cells, then eat individually a breakfast ladled out by one of their number acting as a kitchen policeman for the day.

Then they begin nine hours of work, either in the prison garden or in a workroom where they paste together paper envelopes.

It is a dull life for Arich Raeder, former grand admiral and Nazi naval chief; Walter Funk, reichsminister for economics; Baldur von Schirach, Hitler youth leader; Speer, Nazi minister of armaments and munitions; Baron Konstantin von Neurath, diplomat chosen "protector" of Bohemia, and Karl Doenitz, admiral and twilight Fuehrer of the Third Reich.

Are Docile and Passive

But they are docile and passive. They have never made any complaints. They probably are glad they escaped hanging, the fate meted out to other top Nazis at Nuernberg.

So far as contact with the outside world goes, the prisoners already are as good as dead. They may receive only one visit every two months and one letter every month. Their letters are censored by all four powers to eliminate criticism of any one of the powers. Their visitors see them in the presence of guards.

Short Staffs Close Two Dental Clinics

A shortage of dentists and hygienists has forced the closing of two of the District's 12 dental clinics which serve District school children from kindergarten through high school age.

This was disclosed yesterday by Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, head of the Health Department's Bureau of Dental Services, who attributed the shortage of personnel to low salaries paid by the District.

He said he had sent a letter yesterday to Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, discussing the situation.

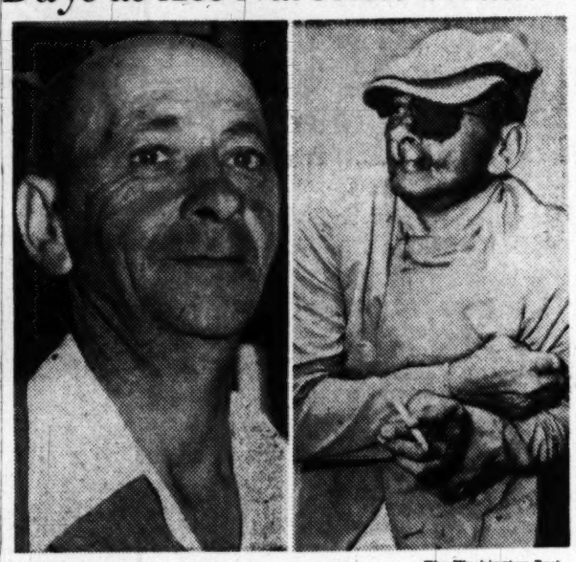
The clinic at the Gage School, 3d and U sts. nw., was closed last Friday, and the clinic at the Buchanan School, in the 1300 block of E st. se., was closed last winter. In each case, resignations of dentists were responsible.

To remedy the situation, Dr. Ostrow will soon submit a pay raise proposal to the District Personnel Board.

The present salary scale for dentists, including the recent $330 raise, is $5232 to $6235, depending on length of service and efficiency. For hygienists, the scale is from $2724 to $3175.

Dr. Ostrow will ask that the dentists' scale be $6235 to $7192 and the hygienists' scale $2974 to $3727.

'Col. Smokey' Helbrant Recalls Days as Ace Narcotics Sleuth



The Washington Post

TALENTED SLEUTH—Maurice Helbrant as the visitor from Miami and in his pose (right) as a dope addict

Maurice "Colonel Smokey" Helbrant slid into town yesterday—a wiry, ferret-like gentleman whose talent for posing as a dope addict has put some 3000 drug peddlers behind bars.

Now, 50, Helbrant has been retired as one of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics ace undercover men. But he hasn't forgotten the biggest thing in his life—the years spent tracking down criminals engaged in "the lowest racket there is."

There was that time in North Carolina, for instance. He was posing as a cocaine addict. Police, not knowing his real identity, arrived in a squad car to pick him up. Then, he said, "one of the cops hauled off and landed a terrific right on my jaw."

That was Smokey's initiation as a narcotic agent.

One of his biggest catches was back in '36. He was assigned to get a man who was known to be the largest dope peddler in the Louisville (Ky.) area.

He arrived unknown in town, bought 35 diamond rings at a five-and-ten, spread the word that he had hot ice and was muscling in on the dope rackets. His quarry fell for the line, sold Smokey several thousand dollars worth of narcotics, and was forthwith arrested.

Helbrant, a resident of Miami, is a slim, deeply tanned man of 5 feet 7 inches. He weighs 150 pounds. He can twist his face into the mannerisms of an addict and talk the lingo like an expert. It's part of him.

Nowadays, he says, it's a good thing he's out of undercover work. "A young man's job." The lure of a job that more than once found him posing as an addict in jail has worn off.

An employe of The Washington Post before joining the Narcotics Bureau in 1925, he dropped into the city room yesterday to take a look around. He is in Washington to line up a Federal job. His present work in the Miami office of the Housing Expediter is about to terminate with a reduction in force.

But whatever post he lands, he's likely to amuse his friends with the mannerisms that stood him in good stead among the junkies.

Pinched, taut mouth, tears streaming from his eyes, now and then a yawn, now and then a jerk. Dress him in shabby clothes, prop him against a lamppost, and could be a dope peddler would sidle up presently.

That's how it was in the old days, says Colonel Smokey.

Catholics Cite New Red Drive In Germany

Leipzig, Germany, Aug. 31 (AP).—Roman Catholic sources said today that Soviet zone Communists are sharply increasing pressure against the church.

A few weeks ago, these sources said, Russian soldiers arrested the Catholic chaplain of the University of Rostock in Mecklenburg. Since his arrest the anti-church campaign, directed almost solely at the Catholics, has increased steadily.

Church sources visiting this Russian zone city for the opening of the annual fall fair, said the burden of the anti-church campaign is being borne by the Communist Free German Youth Organization in a three-fold campaign:

1. Rowdy serenading of religious services.
2. Persuading children and teenagers to keep away from church.
3. Making violent anti-Catholic speeches at public meetings.

Catholics Charged With Influencing German Election

Bad Duerkheim, Germany, Aug. 31 (AP).—Dr. Kurt Schumacher, head of west Germany's Socialist Party, said today the Catholic Church is stronger in Germany than at any time since the Middle Ages.

Schumacher charged repeatedly in the recent election campaign that the church was interfering in the campaign on behalf of his chief rival, the Christian Democratic Party.

The Christian Democrats led all other parties in the voting, with the Socialists second.

"The greater part of the voters were fundamentally of Socialist opinion," Schumacher said. "But they surrendered to the powerful influence of the church."

"We have the impression that they would like to make a second Spain in Germany," he added.

"They must believe that the German state is so weak that one can do things here which are impossible in other countries."

Berlin to Be Reich Capital, Britisher Says

Berlin, Aug. 31 (AP).—Britain's top official in Germany believes the divided city of Berlin some day will become the capital of the German republic.

Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, the British military governor, yesterday described Berlin as "the future capital of the republic" but declined to predict when it would come about. He said the new West German government must support the four-power city with economic aid.

Robertson told a news conference "I am absolutely determined that Berlin, having survived the Soviet blockade, does not fall victim to economic pressure of any other kind." West Berlin has a prospective budget deficit of nearly 300 million dollars.

The British leader said the high commissioners soon may warn former Nazi elements now entering the newspaper field in western Germany that the Allies "have the power to protect the prestige and security of the occupation forces."

Robertson admitted concern over plans of former publishers in the Hitler Reich again to control many newspapers. He said if the German people and government fail to oppose undesirable publications, "I have no doubt the high commissioners will take suitable action."

Red Cross Outlay In June Flood Listed

A total of 138 families in Rockingham, Augusta and Highland counties, Va.—stricken by the flash flood there in June—applied to and received aid from the American Red Cross, officials of the agency in Alexandria reported yesterday.

Expenditures by the Red Cross for disaster rehabilitation in the Virginia counties, and in nearby West Virginia counties struck by the same downpour, total approximately $133,000, according to Andrew M. Gregg, director of disaster rehabilitation for the agency in this region.

Corpus Christi to Get $2,250,000 Hospital

New York, Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Plans for building a $2,250,000 children's hospital at Corpus Christi, Tex., were announced today by the board of trustees of the Driscoll Foundation, founded by the late Mrs. Clara Driscoll of Corpus Christi.

The hospital, which will accommodate 100 patients at first, will serve children up to 16 years of age regardless of financial status, race or religion. The building will not have a cashier's window—the late Mrs. Driscoll specifying that patients need not pay for treatment.

Compromise On Aid Backed

would become available if the defense council asks for it. The final 500 million dollars would be in the form of contracting authority. This would be subject to a possible later cut by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees.

Meanwhile, yesterday the Korean Ambassador, Dr. John Myun Chang, appealed to President Truman for military aid to help meet any possible attack by the Soviets. Chang told newsmen that the danger of an attack on the new republic by North Korean Communist forces appear imminent.

The Joint Committee had previously approved sections of the arms aid bill providing $211,370,000 for nonpact nations, including Korea, Greece, Turkey, Iran and the Philippines.

"We need very quick action by the United States," the Korean Ambassador said yesterday.

"We have very high expectations of the passage of the military aid bill. We want quick action on the part of the United States in supplying us arms and ammunition to the maximum degree of allocation. We feel we are right on the spot and entitled to prime consideration. There is no time to waste."

In working out the compromise on western Europe the joint committee agreed there would be no ban on retooling existing war plants in Europe.

In return for the Democratic concessions on the cut and the stage-by-stage timing of the release of arms funds, Vandenberg agreed to drop the fight against the Administration's proposals to earmark 155 million dollars for machine tools, raw materials and other equipment for existing European plants.

A final vote on the compromise was deferred until next week at the request of Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and others seeking to include aid for Nationalist China. This is opposed by the State Department.

The joint committee is scheduled to hear testimony on China next week from Adm. Oscar Badger, former United States naval commander in Far Eastern waters.

Senate sources pointed out that even after final committee approval the arms aid bill has numerous hurdles before it becomes law.

Still pending is a proposal by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), backed by other economy-minded Senators, to secure an even deeper cut. Then the measure, after the Senate acts, must face a Joint House-Senate conference, with House conferees instructed to cut the total for Europe in half.

sumer subsidies a "trial run" on hog production.

A few minutes after the White House conference, the Senate Agriculture Committee unanimously reported out the compromise Anderson bill. A few Senators reserved the right to propose changes on the floor.

The bill would keep Government price supports at or near present 90 per cent of parity levels next year on the six "basic" corps—corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, rice and peanuts.

It does this by providing mandatory 90 per cent of parity for basic crops brought under quotas for the first time.

Supports for other crops would range flexibly from 75 to 90 per cent of parity and after the first year under quotas, basic crops would revert to flexible supports.

In addition, the compromise bill revises upward the current parity formula to include the cost of farm labor.

The House has simply extended this year's rigid high level supports for another year, repealing flexible provisions of the Aiken law passed by the Eightieth Congress.

The pay-off will come when the House and Senate try to resolve their differences in conferences. Unless the two Houses can agree on a bill, the flexible 60 to 90 per cent of parity provisions of the Aiken bill will take effect next year.

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.) and Republicans generally are supporting the Anderson bill with reservations. Aiken calls it a "strengthened version" of the law that bears his name. He told newsmen the decision meant the Brannan plan "is out."

But only Democrats sat in on the White House conference. Besides Lucas, Anderson, Brannan and Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee, the White House conferees included two members of the House Agriculture Committee, Chairman Cooley (D., N. C.) and Pace (D., Ga.).

The decision to fight for extension of the original Reciprocal Trade Act, without GOP "peril point" restrictions added by the Eightieth Congress, was reached earlier at a separate White House conference.

Sitting in on the trade huddle were Lucas, Chairman George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee and Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

George had originally proposed the compromise temporary extension, as one means of speeding an early adjournment. But following the conference, he told newsmen he agreed it is probably best to get the fight over with now.

Republicans led by Senator Millikin (Colo.) have announced they will fight to the last ditch to restore for the Tariff Commission to set non-mandatory "peril points" as a guide to the President in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements.

8 Boys Freed, 4 Sought, Man Held by Police

There was all kinds of excitement when the Malco Wholesalers, Inc., Warehouse, 472 L st. nw., was broken into at 3 a. m. yesterday.

When police jotted up the scorecard later they found: (1) they had picked up eight juveniles and released them, (2) they had arrested a 21-year-old man and were holding him, and (3) they still had to find four other juveniles and merchandise valued at several thousand dollars.

Police received a report that someone had broken into the warehouse, wherein are stored household wares and electric appliances.

When two scout cars and a headquarters cruiser reached the scene, a gang of boys was seen racing down an alley. Police caught three of the boys, and from them got names of five others who were later rounded up.

While police cars scouted the alleys in the vicinity of the warehouse, they came upon Mervin Machall, 21, a laborer, of 417 6th st. nw., whom they had reason to believe knew something about the warehouse looting. In his room they found two radios, two cameras and two boxes of b-b shot.

Machall told police he had been shooting craps in an alley when four boys came running by with a wagon loaded with merchandise. Some of the merchandise fell from the wagon, he said, so he picked it up and took it to his room.

Police questioned the eight boys they had rounded up. From them they got the story that four other boys, unknown to them, had entered the warehouse and were tossing merchandise to the ground from the second and third floor windows.

The eight boys decided to help themselves, they said, but before they could, police arrived. Police released the eight and began to search anew for four other boys. They charged Machall with housebreaking although he protested he knew nothing about the housebreaking.

A spokesman for the company said merchandise valued at several thousand dollars had been taken. Entrance was gained, he said, by climbing a fire escape and breaking a second floor window.

Autoists May Exceed Limit

police inspector in charge of traffic, describes as one of the more "drastic" of the new revisions concerns emergency vehicles. The old regulations only authorized police cars, ambulances and such to travel not faster than 30 miles an hour and they were supposed to come to a complete stop at red lights and stop signs.

Violation of this has been habitual, of course, and the new code says that such vehicles may proceed past lights and stop signs after slowing down if necessary and may exceed speed limits. But it "does not protect the driver from the consequences of his reckless disregard for the safety of others."

"My only hope," said Inspector Miller, "is that these drivers won't think the regulation has been relaxed to give them permission to drive recklessly."

On a one-way street you may now pass on the left-hand side of a streetcar when it has stopped to load and unload passengers—provided there is a platform or safety zone.

You now must not stop within 5 feet of the nearest open door of a streetcar loading and unloading where there is no platform or safety zone—previously it was 10 feet.

Pedestrians may no longer cross streets diagonally. Amazingly enough, there has been no regulation up to now to cover this point. Also pedestrians now must use the sidewalk if there is one and not walk along the street.

For the two-wheelers: Riding of bicycles on the sidewalk in the business area is now prohibited for anyone. But—a concession to the kids—bikes may be ridden on sidewalks in the residential area provided the rider is under 15 years of age.

Persons riding animals or driving animal-drawn vehicles are subject to all regulations now except those which "by their nature can have no application"—a horse wouldn't be required to have two headlights, for example.

Adoption of the new code here is part of a nation-wide movement to make traffic laws uniform. It has been hailed by traffic experts as a significant step in increasing safety on the streets and highways.

One on the Aisle—

Susan Freshens 'Barretts' Role

By Richard L. Coe

A REMARKABLE YOUNG woman is the Olney's star this week. Those fortunate enough to see her are not likely to forget her.

Susan Peters is the name and she's remarkable for several reasons.

Playing the role associated with Katharine Cornell these past 18 years in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," she brings such quality to the part that Miss Cornell is not missed and, indeed, if she were present, I'm certain she'd applaud her young successor.

Further, this summer's performances in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and, elsewhere in "The Glass Menagerie," are Miss Peters' first on the stage. She became a movie actress to work her way through college. Her appearances in some dozen pictures, most notably to my memory, in "Random Harvest," revealed something more than a pretty ingenue. The young actress showed rare quality.

Beyond this, Miss Peters is paralyzed from the waist down, the result of a tragic hunting accident four and a half years ago. Elizabeth Barrett, the poet Robert Browning rescued from her invalid's couch, is a role fortunately adapted to Miss Peters' misfortune. Unless you happen to know that Miss Peters could not rise from her chair should Rudolph Besier's script demand it, you would not be conscious of her affliction.

This combination of circumstances—the Cornell role in the hands of an inexperienced, crippled girl—might so easily have been the most embarrassing performance of the Olney summer. Instead, it is the triumph of a beautiful, spirited and gifted young woman.

Seen from the audience, Miss Peters has a strikingly beautiful face, fine cheekbones, expressive eyes, all embodying the delicacy associated with the fragile poetess. Meeting her afterward, I was rather surprised to find it a much stronger, more determined face than it had seemed while she was acting. So, then, the actress must be in her.

Model Romantic Play

As Miss Peters plays it and as Howard Bailey has directed it, this "Barretts" has more of lightness and humor than you might expect of a play about a family which trembles under the rule of an insanely tyrannical father. Besier's play is surely a model of dramatic biography, even a theatrical triumph considering its people, Victorian setting and subtly daring subject.

Miss Cornell made it her own, as we all know, bringing to Elizabeth the mellow wisdom of her suffering. In Miss Peters' playing, one senses that Miss Barrett's poetry came from herself, not from the circumstances that made her her father's prisoner.

Miss Peters tells us that she never saw the Cornell conception and that she has carefully avoided trying to copy second-hand memories. This wisdom results in the fresh and appealing heroine of the Olney's play.

The balance of the Olney company is in capable, indeed exceptional hands for a summer theater offering. John O'Hare's Browning is able, indeed, high-spirited and theatrically effective. Frank Sutton, as the father, one of the most overwhelming villains of polite dramatic literature, speaks well and turns out to be an astonishingly young man. Character acting in a young man is unusual enough and, with his talents, I daresay Sutton has a long career ahead.

June Dayton, as the sweet Henrietta who turns from cloying maidenliness to decisive defiance, splendid, contributing gentle humor and a fine dramatic scene for her season's farewell to Olney. Sue Ellen Blake, as the lithping couthin, makes much of the role's humor. Dean Harens turns comic as one of the gently humorous brothers, a capable farewell for the young player, who, as well as his wife, Miss Dayton, has made a definite place for himself with Washington theatergoers these past months.

In lieu of the usual praise heaped on the accomplished pate of set-architect Syrjala, I'd like a bit of space to give credit to Mary McNamee as Miss Barrett's maid, Wilson. Miss McNamee brings distinction and ability to one of those parts so often taken for granted. She is fine as the faithful Wilson and she was fine, too, in Mr. Rathbone's Washington Square establishment for "The Heiress."

Admittedly wary before going, I was completely captivated by Miss Peters and Olney's "Barretts." You will be, too.

"HOPPY," not this page's scribbling Orval Hopkins, but "Hopalong" Cassidy, Bill Boyd, is bound for Hecht's a week from this morning . . . Bill will be on tap for the youngsters in the third floor toy department from 10 ayem till noon and already Hecht's is thinking in terms of 15,000 young visitors, which has been "Hopalong's" speed on his current department store tour.

THE DUPONT begins its Paramount reissue series earlier than expected, tomorrow afternoon, when two Marlene Dietrich films will be shown, "Shanghai Express" and "Desire." . . . Clive Brook, Anna May Wong and Warner Oland are in the first, Gary Cooper and John Halliday in the latter.

LIBBY HOLMAN is scheduled in "O Mistress Mine" next week at Meridian Hill . . . But before that you should see the delightful Nancy Coleman and John Beal in their current turtledoving.

BACK TO THUGGERY—Jimmy Cagney comes back to the Warner this morning in the type of role that made him famous, the tough, rough, nasty lawbreaker. Virginia Mayo is his leading lady, "White Heat" their vehicle

Work Starts Soon At 503-Unit Project In Seat Pleasant

Construction of a four million dollar garden-apartment community in Seat Pleasant, Md., will get under way September 10, Gregory Estates, Inc., builders, announced yesterday.

A special ground-breaking ceremony is planned for 2:30 p. m. that day. Maryland State officials have been invited.

The apartments, general contract for which has been awarded to Wertheimer Construction Corp. of Maryland, will total 503 units.

They are part of a new community planned by Gregory Estates, Inc., which proposes also to include 105 one-family detached houses, as well as a shopping center.

Eating Driver Seized

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 31 (U.P.).—Donald W. Issaks, 27, was held today for driving while eating. Police said he was eating and drinking off a large drive-in tray on the outside of his car while weaving through a main intersection.

Court Moves Keep City Pay Checks Unsigned

Hobbs, N. Mex., Aug. 31 (AP).—It's payday for city workers in this southeastern New Mexico oil town—but who will sign the checks?

The city attorney advised merchants and banks not to cash the checks if they're signed by J. Paul Heard, suspended as mayor by the State comptroller.

And Comptroller J. D. Hannah says he can't sign them either because Heard has filed a court action keeping him from acting as mayor.

Gas Rate Rise Backed in PUC

Corporation Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison on the rate proposal, McElfresh commented:

"I would recommend approval of the increase requested conditioned on recovery of excess return."

He said he had in mind the "principle incorporated in the modified sliding scale plan" adopted by the PUC for the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The modified sliding plan calls for setting aside in a special reserve account any excess return which may be drawn against in lean years to avoid rate increses.

McElfresh further testified he would "hesitate to recommend adoption of a plan (for rate adjustments) premised on D. C. operations alone, pending a study of the possibilities of rate-making on a system basis in cooperation with Maryland and Virginia Commissions." This study is now under way.

W. A. Roberts, representing the Gas Consumers and Independent Dealers, served notice last night he would require a minimum of another 2½ days to cross-examine company officials. He also indicated he would challenge the approved 6 per cent rate of return now allowed to the utility firm.

The appliance dealer group has been fighting the company for installing the appliances the utility sells. The company has countered that the appliance installation issue is not germane to the current rate proceeding.

The remainder of the all-day testimony yesterday was devoted to cross-examination of Otis H. Ritenour, company comptroller, by Roberts.

Slav Reports Called Rumors

representative from Yugoslavia. Vilfan, en route to Lake Success after two weeks in Belgrade, was asked by London newsmen how he felt about Soviet threats against Yugoslavia.

"There is always a feeling of confidencein Yugoslavia," he said.

He said his visit to Belgrade had no political significance.

The reports of troop movements followed a flood of bitter notes between the two one-time allies. The notes complained of treachery and bad faith.

In Washington Secretary of State Dean Acheson, referring to the rumors, said the reports of troop movements appeared to be part of a war of nerves. They are taking place, he added, with a sort of calculated publicity.

No Verification of Rumors

Queries from London to news correspondents of Bucharest and Sofia concerning the Soviet troop reports had brought no response tonight.

United States Army circles in Vienna were skeptical of the reports of Red army troop movements near the Yugoslav border. Qualified army sources were inclined to believe the reports originated with the Russians themselves, to increase pressure in the Kremlin's war of nerves with Tito.

Austrian security officials reported there had been no sign of any unusual Soviet troop movements in their occupied territory.

Some British officials said Tito's government had been asked whether it planned to accuse Russia before the United Nations Security Council of threatening the peace of the world.

London Stock Mart Hit

A dispatch from Belgrade said there was "no direct reference to Security Council action" when British Ambassador Sir Charles Peake talked with Deputy Yugoslav Foreign Minister Ales Bebler Sunday. The Belgrade dispatch, however, was not a direct denial of the London report.

Reliable informants at U. N. headquarters at Lake Success believe any talk of presenting the Yugoslav-Russian dispute to the Security Council is a "little eager—a little premature" to say the least.

The many rumors gave the London stock market a bad case of jitters. British government bonds and industrial shares dropped, some as much as 10 shillings ($2).

Tito Accuses Russia Of Employing Force

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, (Thursday) Sept. 1 (AP). — Yugoslavia accused Russia today of using force to place this country in an "unequal and subdued position."

The charge was made in an editorial in the Communist newspaper Borba, official voice of the government of Premier Marshal Tito. The editorial was released by the Ministry of Information in advance of publication.

It came amid a flood of unconfirmed rumors about Soviet troop movements near Yugoslavia's borders.

A few legations in Belgrade are the sources of most crisis reports arising inside this country where, it should be amphasized, an air of calm continues to prevail. These legations claim to have inside knowledge but decline to disclose their sources.

One top official at the United States Embassy here is going on vacation shortly; the acting military attache is busy with workmen repairing his rented house.

American Steel Co. representatives, who keep their ears cocked sharply for trends, went ahead with long-range projects to develop ore resources.

Yugoslav army officers have been vacationing on the Adriatic—and have not been recalled to duty by war scares as they were more than a year ago when the Cominform kicked Tito out.

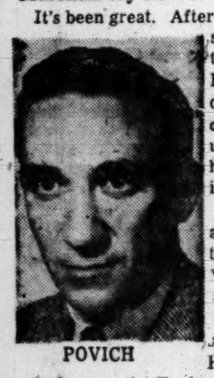
This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FOR THE Redskins it was a comparatively wun'erful August. All in the same month they romped home nicely in their first two exhibition games, showed signs of a running attack, and heard Chief Stockholder George P. Marshall say he was retiring as the team's strategist.

It's been great. After slapping down the Rams with a last-quarter surge, the Redskins galloped to a four-touchdown victory over the Detroit Lions. Harry Gilmer, without help from Baugh, demonstrated he could run the team and click with passes. Rob Goode is stacking up like the line-cracking back the Skins have pined for. And Dan Sandifer is acting like the break-away guy they've lacked.



POVICH

Ah, but there's a rub. Somebody is always spoiling the fun, and this time its traceable to Philadelphia and Greasy Neale's Eagles. They've been staging a how of their own that makes the Redskins' success look modest indeed. Spoilsports, that's what they are, those Eagles. How you gonna lick 'em?

As long as the Eagles are around in the Eastern Division of the National Football League, playing the kind of football they do play, any visions of the Redskins as champions are slightly cockeyed. They don't rate with the Eagles, yet.

WHILE THE SKINS were licking the Rams and Lions, a couple of teams that weren't much account last season, the Eagles were knocking the spots off no less than the Chicago Cardinals—a team that lost only one game in winning the Western Division title last season. Undoubtedly you saw the score of that triumph by the Eagles, 51 to 14, honest.

The Eagles poured it on the team that was the toughest club in the league to lick last year, and by a whopping margin. They scored those 51 points against the Cardinals without benefit of a single touchdown by the tremendous Steve Van Buren, moreover. Seven different Eagles scored their seven touchdowns, a fact no doubt noted by the Redskins' scouts who might have been toying with the idea that to stop the Eagles you had to stop Mr. Van Buren.

Since 1947 the Eagles have been winning these Eastern Division titles, and the Redskins now know what those Western Division clubs went through in those years when the Chicago Bears dominated that sector. For four consecutive years, it was just a question of how many games the Bears would win by, and now the Eagles are beginning to look like the same kind of team.

THE REDSKINS have taken trouncings from the Eagles 8 of the 10 times they have met since 1944, and in their last four games the Philadelphia club has averaged 40 points each time they played the 'Skins. There is no indication that the Eagles have slackened at all. The 51 points they scored against the Cardinals was a feat besides which the Redskins' scoring against the Rams and Lions pales.

In fact, the Eagles long ago replaced the Redskins as not only the best club in the Eastern division, but also the most dazzling. Greasy Neale's wide-flung T-formation is the most colorful tactic in the league, and Tommy Thompson can crowd even Sammy Baugh for the passing honors. Van Burean long ago was established as the best back in the league, and few are better than slim Bosh Prichard.

If the Redskins do out-perform the Eagles, you'd have to say it was an upset. But upsetting the Eagles is the whole idea of the 1949 Redskins, and at this point they do look a far better football team than they were last year. If Gilmer is no flash in the pan, he may give the Redskins' offense more variety with some emphasis on ball carrying, including his own, in contrast to Baugh's steady aerial show.

THE CAUTIOUS customers cannot be blamed, however, for not tumbling over themselves in admiration of the Redskins at this early point. They can recall that the Skins batted down the Rams in Los Angeles by an even greater margin last August, only to move East and take a 43-0 licking from the Packers at Birmingham a couple of weeks later.

Where the Redskins apparently have been lucky, though, is in their absence of injuries. The team was ham-strung early last season by a wave of hurts to their backfield men, and were virtually eliminated as a division title contender before they were properly squared away. In good health, the Redskins ought to be a better ball team.

New Coach John Whelchel may already have made one valuable contribution to his ball club. Redskin coaches last year were moaning the absence of an explosive running back. Right now, Whelchel doesn't have the same complaint. He thinks he has found the guy in what the Redskins called their defensive backfield. Anyway, he jerked Dan Sandifer out of the Skins' defensive set-up and told him he was a ball carrier, and the early results have made both Messrs. Whelchel and Sandifer look good.

Tribe Wins First In 14th A's Capture Final, 2-1

Cleveland, Aug. 31 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians split a twi-night double-header with the Philadelphia Athletics tonight, dropping the second game, 2-1, after outlasting the A's in the 14-inning opener, 7-6.

Lou Brissie went all the way in the nightcap for the A's to rack up his thirteenth win against eight losses. Brissie helped his own cause by singling in Pete Suder in the seventh to tie things up. Sam Chapman's single drove in the winning tally in the eighth inning.

Jim Hegan's home run in the fourteenth inning gave the Indian's their victory over the Athletics in the first game. The Tribe catcher's clout, with none aboard, broke up a deadlock in effect since the sixth inning.

The win extended the Indians' record of extra-inning victories to 16 straight. They have now won 17 of 18 overtime contests this season.

The A's, trailing 6 to 2 until the sixth, came up with a four-run splurge in that frame, driving starting pitcher Gene Bearden from the box and tying up the game.

Big Al Benton relieved Bearden, shut out the Athletics for the rest of the game in a mound duel with Bob Shantz. The Philadelphia hurler entered the game in the fourth.

Mickey Vernon blasted a two-run homer in the first when the Indians tallied three. When Cleve-

Chisox Whip Nats, 4-2, To End Losses

Special to The Washington Post

Chicago, Aug. 31.—The Chicago White Sox snapped out of a six-game losing streak at the expense of Sid Hudson and defeated the Nats, 4-2, here today.

Young Billy Pierce remained warm through two game delays, 53 minutes for a wind storm and nine minutes more for a rain squall. He scattered eight hits, fanned eight and registered his seventh victory.

Hudson, going strong with a 2-1 lead in the fourth inning, weakened after the first storm, and the Sox clipped him for two walks, two hits and two runs in the fourth, and another run and hit in the seventh. Sid dropped his fourteenth game against seven wins.

Chicago opened the scoring in the second inning with a run on Cass Michaels' single to left, and Don Wheeler's tremendous triple to the centerfield wall.

Boby Ortiz opened with a single to center, and scored on Clyde Vollmer's double to the left field corner. Eddie Robinson walked. Eddie Yost, attempting to sacrifice, forced Vollmer at third on Pierce's fine throw to Floyd Baker.

Sam Dente singled to left, Robinson scoring and Yost and Dente taking third and second on the throw to the infield. Al Evans bounced to Baker who cut down Yost at the plate. Hudson ended the uprising by striking out.

With two out in the Chicago fourth, the wind storm hit, and when it subsided, Hudson walked Baker and Pierce. Then the rains came, after which Dave Philley singled scoring Baker and Chuck Kress singled scoring Pierce.

Turnesa Gains in U. S. Amateur; Stranahan, Riegel, Billows Beaten

By Harold Claassen

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—Willie Turnesa won two matches in defense of his United States Amateur golf title today as three of his strongest rivals were snuffed out in the day's double-barreled eliminations.

Turnesa himself whipped Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., three times a runner-up, by a 6 and 5 count in the afternoon round. A year ago the two were finalists at Memphis and Turnesa won the match and title, 2 and 1.

Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, and Skee Riegel of Tulsa, Okla., were the other two contenders who failed to advance into tomorrow's fifth round.

Riegel retired Stranahan in the morning round, 3 and 2, and lost after lunch by the very same score to Jim McHale of Bethlehem, Pa.

Joining Turnesa and McHale in the first of tomorrow's two 18-hole rounds are such stars as Harold Paddock of Aurora, Ohio; Ray Weston of Spokane, Wash.; H. MacGregor Hunter of Pacific Palisades, Calif.; Rufus King of Wichita Falls, Tex., and Robert Fair of Scarboro, Ont., Canada.

Others are Charles Coe of Oklahome City; Charles Dudley of Greenville, S. C.; Frank Strafaci of Flushing, N. Y., and Julius Boros of West Hartford, Conn.

Completing the field of 16 are William C. Campbell, the golfing lawmaker from West Virginia; Harvie Ward of Rocky Mount, N. C.; Crawford Rainwater of Pensacola, Fla.; Fred Kammer, jr., of Detroit, and John Dawson of Hollywood, Calif.

Mixed with victories and defeats over the 6800-yard east course of the Oak Hill Country Club was another young deluge that halted play temporarily just before dusk.

The ease with which Turnesa disposed of two opponents made him the top-heavy favorite to succeed himself Saturday. He had a pair of deuces on his sub-par round while eliminating Sam Penecale of Elkins Park, Pa., 5 and 4, in the forenoon.

He had another pair in the afternoon as he mastered Billows. The Poughkeepsie player said after his defeat "I couldn't have beaten the Turnesa of today with the best round I ever had."

Turnesa has been below Oak Hill's 35, 36—71 par on every trip. In the first of tomorrow's 18-hole rounds he plays Dudley, a former North and South champion.

Riegel got an assist from Stranahan's own clubs in defeating the Ohio millionaire. Twice Stranahan drove into the creek and at other times his short irons lacked a sense of direction.

In the afternoon Riegel appeared tired while McHale, who trounced England's Joe Carr in the forenoon, took the second match in stride.

Boros had the best nine holes of the day as he pushed back John A. Levinson, Chicago, in the fourth round by 5 and 4 in 32 strokes.

Worsham Beaten By Strafaci, 1 Up

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP). Washington, D. C.'s Marvin (Bubby) Worsham was eliminated from the National Amateur Golf Tournament, 1 up, by Frank Strafaci here today.

Worsham wound up with 79, same medal score as the five-times Metropolitan Amateur titlist. Bubby was two down after 12, evened it when Strafaci soared to a seven on the long thirteenth and added a bogey five on the 334-yard fou teenth to Worsham's par. But Worsham took three to reach the sixteenth and they halved the final two later.

Baugh Relaxes After 12 Years As Gilmer Steers Skins' Win

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

En Route to Memphis, Tenn., Aug. 31.—After 12 years of carrying the Washington Redskins on his back, Slingin' Sammy Baugh sat back in well-earned relaxation today as the club rolled toward a Sunday afternoon exhibition clash with the Chicago Bears in Memphis. Slingin' Sam became the Redskins insurance man last night in Denver.

While the Washington pros were hanging up their second straight preseason triumph, a 31-7 rout of the Detroit Lions, the 35-year-old Texas rancher saw less than three minutes of action. The only part he had in the scoring was to hold the ball while Dick Poillon kicked four extra points and a field goal.

Baugh's quarterbacking, passing and scoring duties were turned over to the Alabama flash, Harry Gilmer, and the tow-headed youngster came through to high style. He handled the team on its first five marches with the ball, three of them ending in touchdowns.

But he came in for three series of plays in the second half merely for the exercise. Gilmer, with a veteran line in front and a backfield completed by Fullback Ed Quirk and Halfbacks Dan Sandifer and Rob Goode, marched the opening kickoff 80 yards to a touchdown in 15 plays. Running efforts made all of the yardage as Harry's first two passes were wide.

Finally Gilmer connected with Lanky Bones Taylor on an 11-yard toss toward the sidelines. The Redskins were still 22 yards away from a score two plays later when the Gilmer-to-Taylor combination worked again. Taylor was wandering around all alone in the end zone when he took the pass that made it 6-0 favoring the Redskins and put them out front for good.

In spite of fine running by Bill Dudley and Camp Wilson, the Lions were no threat whatever in the opening quarter. The Redskins were charging like Comanches and it was one such charge, made by Wingman Herb Schoener, which opened Washington's second successful offensive as the period waned.

Shoener rushed Jimmy Youell's punt, the ball sliding off the former Redskins foot and out of bounds on the Skins' 42. In one scintillating play a Gilmer-to-Taylor pass carried 55 yards to the Lion 3, but a penalty for Redskin clipping brought the ball back.

It was from the Redskin 25, then, that Gilmer led the Washington forces to touchdown No. 2 in 16 plays. Quirk and Sandifer did the ball-carrying up to the Lion 34, from which point Gilmer lobbed a 30-yard jump pass to Taylor as the Oklahoma end tumbled out of bounds. On third down the Redskins were still 3 yards away but Goode found a hole off left guard and piled across easily.

The third touchdown scored under Gilmer's management necessitated only one play. Poillen plowed into block a Youell punt and Pannelli ran the ball back to the Lion 39 where Gilmer took over. He sent Eddie Saenz, smallest and fleetest of his halfbacks around right end and that was all, brother.

Hoyas Worry Over Conn's Ulcer Threat

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

GEORGETOWN'S Billy Conn, whose breakaway runs last year were calculated to give opposing coaches ulcers, may have them himself.

Biggest problem of the brilliant open-field performer was supposed to have been the left knee he banged up last season. Conn reported for fall practice at the Hilltop with the knee in excellent condition.

Now it's the stomach disorder that may handicap him.

Dr. Gerald H. McAteer, team physician, said yesterday Conn shows symptoms of peptic ulcers. However, the doctor wouldn't commit himself until further tests are made.

Conn will report to Georgetown Hospital this morning for the tests.

Dr. McAteer also said that even if Conn does have ulcers he thinks he could play football this season. A proper diet could be arranged for him.

Conn looked a bit drawn at 159 pounds—last year he weighed 180. The Hoya sophomore sensation said his trouble began during the summer and a Newark physician diagnosed it as peptic ulcers.

If Conn isn't in top shape, it would be a serious blow to the hardly overmanned Hoyas. Coach Bob Margarita disclosed yesterday that the fractured clavicle of Babe Baranowski isn't fully healed yet.

Terps Lose Center, 2 Sophomore Backs

Maryland assembled its 66-man football squad for reporters and photographers yesterday, and the only news around was bad news—for Head Coach Jim Tatum.

Three-deep in manpower, Tatum soon became chin-deep in gloom when he learned that three of the huskies he'd counted on would not be with him this fall.

Most important loss was Bill Everson, 200-pound junior center from Pittsburgh. Everson hurt his knee last year and doctors advised him to lay off football for a year. He was counted on to be one of the Terps principal line-backers.

The other two losses were in the backfield. George Howard, sophomore quarterback from Baltimore, has decided to give up football and concentrate on baseball, which he hopes to play professionally. Another quarterback, Andy McDonald, Flint Mich., sophomore, transferred to Central Michigan College to be nearer home.

Maryland and George Washington, along with 14 other Southern Conference schools, open practice today.

Wins Own No-Hitter

Zeke Zimmerman walked, stole second, and scored on a single by Roger Groettum to back up his no-hit pitching performance as the Arlington Postoffice defeated FBI, 1-0, in a Recreation Softball League game at West Potomac yesterday.

Raschi Fails As N. Y. Lead Is Cut to 2 Over Boston

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns, scoring in every inning but two, jumped soundly on the first-place New York Yankees for the second straight night with a 10-to-3 triumph before 11,660 fans. It was the sixth consecutive series the Browns have won on their current home stand.

Ned Garver pitching for the Browns allowed 12 hits, 2 walks and struck out 7. He also doubled in the fifth sending Les Moss to third. Moss scored when Gene Woodling fumbled the ball.

The Browns jumped on Starter Vic Raschi for four runs in the first inning to drive him from the mound with his ninth loss of the year.

Ten Brownies batted in that inning, nine of them against Raschi before he left for the first of three relief hurlers. Doubles by Stan Spence and Dick Kokos figured in the scoring of that frame as did an error by Yankee infielder George Stirnweiss.

Jack Graham added another St. Louis tally in the second with his twenty-second home run of the season. Then Kokos hit his twenty-second four-bagger in the eighth with Graham on base.

More St. Louis Run

The Browns picked up single runs in the third, fifth and sixth frames, and only in the fourth did they fail to hit.

Joe DiMaggio batted in two of the Yankee runs with a single in the first and a double in the seventh. He struck out in the fifth with runners on first and third and no one out. He had two other singles in the game.

Boston Homers Down Tigers, 7-4

Detroit, Aug. 31 (AP).—Home runs by Bobby Doerr and Ted Williams, each good for two runs, provided the margin tonight as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Detroit Tigers, 7-4. The win lifted the second place Bosox to within two games of the league-leading New York Yankees.

Colts Buy Wedemeyer From Dons

Los Angeles, Aug. 31 (AP).—Herman Wedemeyer, who entered professional football as a highly publicized running star at St. Mary's, today was sold outright by the Los Angeles Dons to the rival Baltimore Colts of the All-America Football Conference.

The Hawaiian halfback, who never lived up to his college form in the pro ranks, went to the Colts in a straight cash deal. The amount was not disclosed.

NFL Carries Pro Grid War To Video, Bans Harmon Show

Los Angeles, Aug. 31 (AP)—Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League can consider himself rapped on the knuckles by the Southern California chapter of the Football Writers Association.

The chapter unanimously went on record protesting Bell's action in banning former football star Tommy Harmon from televising the Los Angeles Ram-Washington Redskins football game last Friday night.

Harmon, former Michigan All-America star and later with the Rams, said Bell kept him from performing for the television audience because he had televised a game for the Los Angeles Dons of the rival All-America Conference.

Paul Zimmerman, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, which sponsored the game, told the football writers that Bell's action was an abridgement of the freedom of speech and could, if carried through, be applied to freedom of the press for writers who cover both leagues.

The chapter delegated Zimmerman to communicate its protests to Bell.

Columnists Braven Dyer and Bill Henry of the Times took over the Ram-Sedskin television.

"To be consistent, Bell should have barred me, too," Dyer observed, "because I did two Don games last year."

Bell Defends His Policy on Harmon Ban

Bert Bell stoutly defended his Tommy Harmon ban last night.

The voluble head man of the NFL told The Washington Post by phone, "It's just sound advertising policy, that's all. We have nothing against Harmon. He played in our league. But we certainly won't approve any broadcaster who's broadcasting at the same time for another professional football group.

"We're the National Football League. We aren't affiliated with any other and don't want to be confused with any, either.

"After all, do you think a sponsor would let a radio or television star appear for a business competitor? It just doesn't make sound advertising sense."

Henrich May Rejoin Yanks In 3 Weeks

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—The New York Yankees took new hope today when their club physician, Dr. Sidney Gaynor, said he "wouldn't be surprised" if injured Tommy Henrich was back in uniform within three weeks.

After an examination at Lenox Hill Hospital, Dr. Gaynor said he thought Henrich would be able to play before the season ends, and, of course, in the world series, if the Yanks win the pennant. Earlier it had been feared he would be lost for the season.

Henrich arrived by plane from Chicago and was taken to the hospital for an examination. Dr. Gaynor removed the cast from Henrich's back and said he would fit the outfielder-first baseman in a special corset.

Dr. Gaynor said Henrich would be sent to his Ridgewood (N. J.) home in two or three days.

Henrich, who suffered two fractured transverse processes of the lower vertebrae last Sunday when he crashed into a wall at Chicago, was cheerful and optimistic.

Rail Bird, Dove Season Opens Today

By Ralph Murdock

TODAY marks the official opening of the dove and rail bird (sora) hunting seasons and according to Ralph Sunderland, a sora guide in the Pig Point area, the sport should start off with a "bang." Ralph says that there are about 20 available marsh skiffs at this location and all bookings will be made through Mrs. James Greenwell. The rates are $10 a tide which includes the boat and a licensed guide, commonly called a "pusher."

Murdock

Sora shooting hours will be one-half hour before sunrise until sundown although the best shooting occurs within two hours before the peak of the flood tide. Today's "zero hour" should be about 10:30 a. m. High water is expected at Pig Point at approximately 12:45.

It appeared that Solomon's Island is the hot spot for bluefish at the present time. The blues are surfacing each day at this location and little boats, big boats, and anything that floats are averaging 100 fish to the boat. One unusual catch reached the 900 mark. Below are a few catches from this spot.

Two anglers trolling from a rowboat caught 16 of these gamesters that averaged 1½ pounds. In addition they nabbed 6 spot, 5 hardheads, 5 flounders, 2 trout, 3 rock, 2 sea bass and 1 sea robin while still fishing. All in all, they landed eight different species of fish. They were Paul Meyers, Engineer at WRC Radio station, and Allyn Ferrell, Washington Gas Light Co.

William T. Roy, Assistant Parliamentarian at the House of Representatives, Mrs. W. R. Armstrong and Donna Wachtel hauled in 102 bluefish which ranged up to 2 pounds. They were fishing from the "Althea" with Capt. Sam Parks at the wheel.

How's this one? Charles Ruttenberg, his son Reid, age 13; Marsh Horn, his son Richard, age 17, and Herbert Smit (with no "H" on the end) pulled in 150 blues. Their average weight was 1¼ pounds. Capt. Bill Adams was their skipper. The catch was made from the "Red Sails."

Here's a haul where 399 fish were taken. It consisted of 265 blues, from ¾ to 1½ pounds, 120 rock and 14 trout. The anglers were Mr. and Mrs. Phil Lustine, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lust, Charles Stofberg, A. H. Sidenspinner, Bertrand Mackey and Michail Robey, 12 years old. It was Michael's first fishing trip.

The surprise catch was a 3-pound Kingfish, taken by Stofberg while trolling between Drum Point Light and Little Core Point. It was a rare specimen for this area. The big take was made from the "Annie B." with Capt. Rodie Langley doing the steering. On the surface, it looks like everyone is "getting the blues."

At Ocean City six wandering anglers were pursuring the elusive marlin. They were John Snell, A. R. Shepherd, P. C. Miller, Frank Frazier, Robert Boykin and Durant Dean. The local delegation spend the whole forenoon trying to locate the first marlin. They finally gave up the idea when Capt. Perry H. Simpson suggested a whirl at dolphin.

The shift proved a success for 18 large dolphin and 1 albacore were boated by the Washingtonians. John Snell grabbed honors by landing a 23-pound dolphin after a 20-minute tussle.

The dolphin averaged 8 pounds each and the albacore tipped the beam at 14½ pounds.

Archery Match Listed

The Old Dominion Archery Association and the Antietam Archers are cosponsoring a six-golds tournament Sunday and Monday at the Willow Lane Show Grounds, Hagerstown, Md.

WHERE THEY'RE BITING

Blue Fish—Solomon's Island is our "best bet" for the fighting blues. Excellent conditions here. Best lures are all white and white with yellow heads. Point Lookout is our next choice.

Trout—Point Lookout, Cornfield Harbor on the Potomac and the lower Patuxent Rivers. Peeler crab for bait excells.

Spot—In big schools and a little harder to find.—A catch of 211 reported off Franklin Manor. Good fishing should be had along the western side of the bay.

Rockfish—Eastern Bay Area and mouthr of the Chester River. The tickle busters are a trifle scarce.

Perch—White and Yellow. We pick the Severn and South Rivers for the larger size.

Drobney in 3d Round at Forest Hills

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP).—A loafing, carefree Pancho Gonzales brought some anguish to his admirers today before he buckled down and won his second round match in defense of his national amateur tennis title.

The big Los Angeles star, ever prone to play just as hard as he is forced to win, had no bite in his game whatever in pulling out a tight win over Straight Clark from Pasadena, 6—4, 7—5, 7—5.

Many of those who had been picking Pancho to breeze through to the final and then beat Ted Schroeder began to wonder after this one. Clark, though a talented player, is rated only No. 13 in his own Southern California.

Wins on Service

Gonzales began puffing as early as the second set from the running Straight gave him. in the end he subdued his man only by virtue of a superior service which Straight could not break, though he led 5—4 in each of the last two sets.

A light rain fell throughout the match and eventually caused curtailment of the third day's program. All seeded players who saw action came through on schedule, though Jaroslav Drobny, the Czech, got a lot of action for his money.

Drobny, second seeded foreigner, ran into what probably is the hardest first service being blazed across today. It comes off the racket of Hugh Stewart, a towering basketball star from the University of Southern California.

Stewart won the first set 6—4 to the high glee of the stadium crowd. He lost the next three 6—4, 6—3, 6—2 as Drobny caught his breath and began returning the rockets. But it was fun while it lasted.

Cochel Beats Behrens

Besides Gonzales and Drobny, the only other seeded men who finished their matches ahead of the rain were Earl Cochell o San Francisco, No. 7 on the home list, and John Bromwich of Australia, the No. 4 foreigner.

Cochell overwhelmed Buddy Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6—1, 6—3, 7—5. Browich toyed with Andrew Paton of Ann Arbor, Mich., 6—2, 6—0, 6—0.

Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N. J., was leading Gilbert Shea of Los Angles when the rain stopped them. Shea won the first set 6-3, Moylan the next two 14-12, 6-1.

Sam Match of Los Angeles was on the verge of closing out Gianni Cucelli, Italian Davis Cupper, when they ran for cover. Match won the first two sets 6-0, 7-5 and was leading 4-1 in the third.

In the women's division Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont, defending champion, defeated Nancy Morrison of Garden City, N. Y., 6—3, 6—1. Shirley Fry of Akron, Ohio, eliminated Mrs. Virginia Johnson of Boston, 6—1, 6—4. and Gertrude Moran of Santa Monica ousted Mrs. Betty truthers of San Diego, 6—2, 8—6.

Mrs. Betty Hilton and Mrs. Jean Walker-Smith of the British Wightman Cup team also won. Mrs. Walker-Smith eliminated Sylvia Knowles of Newport, 6—2, 7—5. Mrs. Hilton toyed with Mrs. Marion Raful of Akron, Ohio, 6—1, 6—2.

8-Year Loyalty to Nag Brings Bankruptcy

Salisbury, England, August 31 (AP).—Frederick Poll handed out a free lesson today on how to go bankrupt.

Poll told the bankruptcy receiver he owned a horse—a jumper—for eight years. Its keep and training cost him £5000 ($20,000) from 1939 to 1947.

Year after year he bet on the nag and year after year the bookies loved him. It never won a race.

Came a day at the Wincanton track in 1947 when the beast looked like a cinch. Poll bet £50 ($200). Halfway around the course his horse refused to hop over the hurdle.

So Poll swore off betting.

Charity Gets Fans' "Kick-In"

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 31 (AP).—The manager of the Rock Hill, S. C., team of the Class B Tri-State League was ordered today to turn over to charity $160 contributed by fans to pay fines levied against him for arguing with umpires.

President George M. Trautman of the minors sent the order to Manager Richard D. Bouknight.

Rock Hill contributed the $160 given Bouknight after league president C. M. Llewellyn fined him a total of $50. The fines followed protests by Bouknight to umpires in games with Rock Hill at Asheville, N. C., August 7 and Knoxville at Rock Hill, August 8.

Sam's $50 Ticket is Still Lost

New York, Aug. 31 (AP).—Sam Renick reported today that he still couldn't find a pari-mutuel ticket worth $3680.

It did not show up at the Aqueduct Race Track, either, where Renick yesterday bet $50 on Orange Sun, a 72-to-1 winner—and then lost his ticket.

Renick virtually took apart the suit he was wearing, but he could not locate the little slip of pasteboard.

The State gets the money if no one claims it.

Looking Forward to Dignified Season

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 31 (AP).—You can't say the University of Washington is overconfident about the coming football season.

The Huskies will meet Minnesota and Notre Dame on successive Saturdays of a rugged schedule.

Athletic Director Harvey Cassill takes this view:

"We teach our athletes at the university to win with pride and lose with dignity. If we run into any more schedules like this we may end up as the most dignified team in the country."

Book-of-the-Season Plan Proposed

St. Louis, Aug. 31 (AP).—C. A. Louis, an ardent fan of the St. Louis Browns, came up with an idea today that he thinks will do away with talk that the ball club be moved to some other city.

"Print 100,000 books, five tickets in each book, for next year's ball games, and sell the books for $6.75 each," Louis explained.

"This will insure the club at least 500,000 paid admissions for 1950 and it would stop this business about moving the Browns to Los Angeles, Baltimore and so forth."

The Browns' owners undoubtedly would be happy to have receipts from 500,000 tickets in 1950. The question is: Could they find the salesmen?

Longden Reminded of County Fairs

Bath, England, Aug. 31 (AP)—Johnny Longden, champion American jockey, took his first look at an English race track today.

"It's similar to what we know as a country fair course in the States," he said when he saw the nearly oval Bath track.

Of Heart Attack

'Mac' Smith, Golf Great, Dies at 59

Glendale, Calif., Aug. 31 (AP).—MacDonald Smith, for 40 years one of the world's great golfers, but never a big-time winner, died today of a heart attack.

Smith

The Carnoustie Scot who tied his equally famous brother, Alex, for the U. S. Open crown 'way back in 1910, only to lose in a playoff, had been in ill health for years. He was 59.

Despite his poor health, however, he kept up with his golf, playing frequent rounds and giving instruction at Oakmont course here.

His best tournament was the Los Angeles Open, which he had won four times. First was in 1928. He amazed the experts by repeating the next year, made it three in 1932 and four in 1934.

He was a figure for decades in the nation's big tournaments, but aside from his 1910 tie, his closest to capturing the National Open was 20 years later, in 1930.

That year he almost spoiled Bobby Jones' grand slam—the four major golf titles—but finished two strokes back of the master. Three times he was within the top four in the British Open.

Although he had heart trouble for several years, his death came as a surprise. He had been suffering recently from a slight cold. He died in his sleep.

Born in Carnoustie, Scotland, he came to America as a youth with Alex and three other brothers, all of them important golfers at one time or another, George Willie and Jim.

In recent years, he had been pro at the Oakmont Country Club here, but resigned the post several months ago. Demand for his services as an instructor kept his schedule overloaded, despite a reputation as a strict disciplinarian of his pupils.

No funeral arrangements have yet been made.

Colasanto Files in Alexandria As Candidate for Court Post

Nicholas A. Colasanto, recently deposed city manager of Alexandria, yesterday formally announced he would be an independent candidate for election as Civil and Police Court judge November 11.

Colasanto

Colasanto filed his formal notice of candidacy with Elliott F. Hoffman, clerk of the city's Corporation Court, assuring at least a two-way contest for the seat held by Judge James R. Duncan since 1935. Judge Duncan, unopposed for re-election since 1941, was chosen as the Democratic nominee August 8.

A practicing attorney in Alexandria for 18 years, Colasanto has been the central figure in local political upheavals twice recently. The first time was in November, 1947, when he was named city manager by a 6-3 vote of the city council after it had ousted Carl Budwesky; the second, last March, when a new, seven man council voted 4-3 to dismiss him.

Both the appointment and dismissal split the council into opposing factions whose disagreement was reflected subsequently in votes on other administrative matters.

Before accepting the post as city manager, Colasanto had been active in a wide variety of civic and recreational projects. In February, 1947, he received the Fraternal Order of Eagles' award for outstanding community service. He was chairman of the local infantile paralysis "Mile of Dimes" drive in both 1946 and 1947. During World War II, he served as voluntary counsel for servicemen stationed in the Alexandria area.

Local Republicans have indicated they will not enter a nominee in the judgeship race. Filing deadline is September 12.

Art Cook Defends Rifle Title in National Shoot

Washington's 21-year-old Arthur Cook, will defend his American smallbore rifle title at the National Rifle Association's 65th annual championship at Camp Dodge, Iowa, September 3-4.

Cook, the National and Olympic champion, will be firing on a range which he has never before seen and one which abounds in ragweed pollen, horror of all hay fever sufferers, among which the young University of Maryland junior is numbered.

Cook will be competing against 250 of the best riflemen in the Nation, several of whom have defeated the young champ this year in smaller tournaments. Cook has bowed to A. C. Jackson, Brooklyn, N. Y. Laurence Moore, Aberdeen, Md., and the man he dethroned last year, G. Wayne Moore, Washington, Pa.,

YOUR CAR NEEDS ANTI-RUST GASOLINE because all gasolines contain minute quantities of water caused by moisture condensation. As a result, rust and corrosion attack the fuel system. Rust forms inside your gasoline tank. Non-ferrous parts of fuel pump and carburetor corrode. To prevent rust and corrosion, RD-119, the amazing new chemical in Sinclair Gasolines, coats the inside of your car's fuel system with an invisible protective layer.

RUSTED IN ORDINARY GASOLINE—This steel rod is heavily coated with rust after immersion in ordinary gasoline for only 48 hours in prescribed laboratory test. In test, a small proportion of water was added to the gasoline, because all gasoline contains minute quantities of water caused by moisture condensation.

White House Is Asked To Pick 1 of 2 Cities For 6000 Census Jobs

The White House has been asked to decide which of two cities should get up to 6000 temporary Census Bureau clerical jobs—Philadelphia or Boston.

The positions were originally slated for this city, but they will now be moved out in line with the President's policy to give Federal aid to distressed economic areas.

Nevertheless, between 4000 and 6000 new Census jobs will open here in the next eight months. The employes will tabulate, analyze, and write reports on next year's general census.

Commerce Secretary Sawyer has made the recommendation for the transfer of 6000 of the temporary jobs—jobs that will last from a year to 18 months—to either Philadelphia or Boston. The Commerce report is said to have pointed out that the work could be done more economically in Philadelphia, and besides, the Pennsylvania city had a higher percentage of unemployment than Boston.

But adequate office space is a problem in Philadelphia. It seems that Census wants offices now occupied by the Veterans' Administration and VA is most reluctant to move. If Census could have been guaranteed the space in question, Philadelphia would have been a cinch to get the big payroll. Now Boston is offering adequate office space. Powerful political groups of both cities are hot after the project and the pressure is so great that a White House decision on the city is believed necessary.

A few personnel and supervisory people from headquarters here will be moved to whichever city gets the employes. The bulk of the jobs to be transferred will be card-punch operators, editing, and clerical positions.

MINES: Interior's Bureau of Mines is being reorganized. Eight regional offices to handle bookkeeping, disbursements, and accounts are to be set up at Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, Denver, San Francisco, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Bartlesville, Okla.; Albany, Oreg., and Juneau, Alaska.

Many of the employes here in that work will be asked to transfer to one of the above cities. However, this loss of people here will be offset somewhat by the transfer here from the field of a number of technical employes. One of the aims of Dr. James Boyd, the director, is to do less administrative work and more technical staff work here.

The headquarters office here is being organized into four main divisions, health and safety, fuels and explosives, minerals, and administrative. The staff here is to be reorganized on a commodity basis such as coal, copper, lead and zinc, construction materials, rare and precious metals, etc.

PEOPLE: The Albert Gallatin Award for long and exemplary Treasury service was made yesterday to W. Lorrain Cook and Myrta Harper both of whom are retiring from the Internal Revenue Bureau . . . Berchmans T. Fitzpatrick, a native of this voteless city, has been promoted to deputy administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, a job recently created by law. He will move up to administrator in the absence of Raymond M. Foley.

PREFERENCE: The Veterans of Foreign Wars has reversed its previous convention stands and it is now opposed to any changes in the Veterans Preference Act of 1944.

Previously, the VFW was on record for requiring veterans to earn a passing mark on Civil Service tests before preference points could be added, and to limit 10 points to those veterans who had a 10 per cent or more compensable injury. In fact, the VFW was mainly responsible for the bill in Congress on these points.

When the measure was first considered several years ago the American Legion was sympathetic to it. But its spokesmen reversed themselves after receiving protests from their members. The VFW, on the other hand, reindorsed the bill at last year's convention, but this year abandoned it.

All of which will make it more difficult to amend any part of the Veterans Preference Act. Congress listens to the veterans' groups.

The No. 1 objective of the Administration is an amendment to the act to give career nonveterans greater job security. A bill before the Senate wouldn't apply preference during layoffs to employes with 15 or more years of service. Representative George Miller (D., Calif.), a veteran himself who is studying a similar bill in the House, would lower the limit to 12 years.

Contractors' Plan Fails To Satisfy Plasterers

Walkout Continues When Negotiators Split Over Health Fund Contribution

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Local subcontractors yesterday acceded to the demand of striking AFL plasterers for a 2 per cent health and welfare fund, but failed to bring the 1-day walkout to an end.

A negotiations session called by Federal Conciliator Gilbert McCutcheon broke up after a disagreement over procedure between the Employing Plasters Association and Local 96, AFL Operative Plasterers over procedure.

The subcontractors, newly represented by Francis J. Kelly, attorney, accepted the fund in principle, and offered to contribute to it at the rate of 6 cents for each hour worked by every employe. The plasterers, among the highest paid in the construction industry, get $3 an hour. Thus the 6 cents represents 2 per cent of the regular hourly pay.

The union demanded that the 2 per cent be applied to their gross pay, which would include premium pay for overtime and holiday work, as well as regular pay for a 40-hour work week. At this point the negotiations were broken off.

There was no change in the deadlocked dispute between striking AFL operating engineers and teamsters and the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co. The strikers, seeking a 25 cents an hour pay hike, went out Monday.

Truck Driver Strike Is Postponed Here

A walkout of 450 trucking industry drivers and helpers here, scheduled to begin this morning, was postponed yesterday pending further negotiation.

Charles Bell, spokesman for local 639, AFL Teamsters Union, announced there would be no work stoppage for an indefinite period.

In Baltimore, where the freight drivers were also due to go out today, Union Business Agent Thomas J. Healy announced that the strike was off in that city, too. "We're not so far apart," Healy said, referring to negotiations between the union and 55 trucking firms there.

Altogether, some 2000 drivers and helpers in five cities were prepared to strike this morning for higher wages, a shorter work week, and an area contract providing equal working conditions and wages in the five cities.

Teamster union officials in Baltimore said late yesterday that freight men in the three other cities—Winchester, Va.; Hagerstown and Cumberland, Md.—would probably toe the mark in line with the strike delay in Washington and Baltimore."

The Associated Press reported from Hagerstown, however, that Business Agent E. W. Butler had announced his 300 men would walk out if the new contract is not signed by 12:01 this morning.

Negotiations here were conducted by a union committee and the labor relations council of the District Trucking Association. Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the truck operators, said after a negotiating session yesterday that no date had been set for the next meeting.

The local drivers, who get $1.18 an hour now, are seeking $1.45 an hour and a cut in hours from 48 to 40 a week. The teamsters' union wants the same pay in the other four cities as well.

WTOP Engineer Wage Increase Agreed on

An agreement on working conditions and wages for engineers at WTOP AM and FM was reached last night between John S. Hayes, vice president and general manager of the radio station, and Laurence J. Holt, business manager of Local 1215, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

In a joint statement issued by the negotiators after yesterday's meeting, top scales in three categories were revealed as follows: staff technicians with five years' service, $127.50 a week, assistant supervisors, $146, and supervisors, $152.50. This represents a $2.50 raise all along the line. The new contract is to remain in force until October 1, 1950. A total of 32 engineers are affected by the contract.

Downtown Stores Resume Regular Saturday Hours

Downtown District stores, which have been closed on Saturdays for the last eight weeks, will resume regular hours this week.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association announced yesterday that stores that curtailed their schedules during July and August will remain open all day this Saturday, and will continue to operate on a six-day week thereafter. Both department and specialty stores are affected.

As has been the case in the past, the stores will be closed all day next Monday in observance of the Labor Day holiday.

Businessman Denies He Shot Del-Negro

Ochs appeared in court yesterday at extradition proceedings brought to return him to Maryland. The case was continued at the government's request until September 30.

Police investigators yesterday were hampered by skimpy and conflicting stories. Del-Negro has told them he does not know who shot him. Ochs first told police, Friday, he had been knifed and identified his assailant as Harding. Yesterday, he said he had not been knifed, but slugged, probably with a pistol butt, and said he did not know who slugged him. Ochs has told police he does not want to prosecute, anyway.

Ochs appeared in court with Charles E. Ford as his attorney. Ford also represents Del-Negro in a current gambling case. Ford formerly represented Harding, the man Ochs identified as his assailant. Harding has a criminal record which dates to 1927.

Ochs told reporters yesterday he was not at the Crossroads restaurant when the shooting occurred. He said he had been there, drinking with a girl friend, but left an hour before Del-Negro was shot in both legs. Del-Negro was released from Prince Georges County Hospital yesterday.

Ochs said he was struck over the right eye and then over the left eye as he left the night club and was never stabbed. He was treated at Sibley Hospital for "cuts" and released.

Ochs first described the evening as "just a friendly little misunderstanding between old friends," yesterday he said he did not know Harding.

He said he had never handled even a toy pistol, and did not know why Prince Georges County authorities "are after me, unless they want to make me a goat."

Lobby Conspiracy Charges Against 6 Are Dropped

Conspiracy-to-lobby charges have been dropped against four men and two organizations indicted in June, 1948.

The indictments, charging criminal conspiracy and violation of the law to regulate lobbying, were dismissed yesterday by District Court Judge Edward M. Curran against: James E. McDonald, Commissioner of Agriculture of Texas when indicted; Tom Linder, Commissioner of Agriculture of Georgia when indicted; Ralph W. Moore of Granger, Tex.; Robert N. Harris of New York City, the National Farm Committee, and the Farm Commissioners Council.

Justice Department attorneys, after the indictments were quashed, filed an information charging Moore, McDonald, Linder, Harris and the National Farm Committee with violating the law to regulate lobbying, a misdemeanor.

Driver Held For Trial in Man's Death

The driver of a bus which fatally injured a 67-year-old real estate man Tuesday was ordered yesterday to stand trial in the criminal division of Municipal Court.

Harrison

Following an inquest, a coroner's jury held the driver, Warren J. Harrison, 38, of 5425 N. 22d rd., Arlington, responsible for the death of J. Leslie Watson, of Upper Marlboro, sales manager for O. B. Zantzinger Co., real estate firm here.

Harrison is charged with negligent homicide and failing to yield right of way to a pedestrian.

The inquest yesterday came after the bus driver's appearance in Municipal Court, where the $1000 bond he was freed on following the accident was returnable. Trial was set for September 6 and the bond continued.

Police testified at the inquest that Watson was crossing south on K st. nw. at 11th st., walking with a green light, when he was struck by Harrjson's bus. The vehicle, owned by the Washington, Maryland & Virginia Coach Co., was turning left into K st. from 11th st.

In a statement furnished police, and read at the inquest, the bus driver said that as he turned into K st. he was watching the rear view mirror on the left side of the bus to see if a streetcar was behind him. He said he did not notice any pedestrians in front of the bus.

Harrison also said in the statement that the left cornerpost, to which the rear view mirror is attached, constituted an obstruction to his view. He did not testify in person.

2 Soldiers Injured As Car Hits Abutment

Two soldiers were injured at about 9:30 p. m. when their car veered off the road and struck a bridge abutment on Route 301, near Marlboro, Md.

Maryland State Police said Corp. John Zimmerman, 22, of Camp Pickett, Va., was in "fair" condition at Walter Reed Hospital with severe lacerations to his face, head and hands, and Pvt. Patrick Thompson, 20, of Fort Meade, Md., also in "fair" condition at Prince Georges General Hospital with possible fractured ribs.

State police said evidence indicated the car skidded 250 feet with the brakes on before hitting the abutment, then after the crash turned over and slid another 300 feet. The impact tore off the rear end of the car.

Virginia Schools Reported Short of Teachers, Buildings

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The Virginia State Board of Education yesterday took a long, hard look at the State's public school system and found it sadly wanting.

The statement of prevailing conditions and recommendations for improvement were included in a 123-page report released yesterday by G. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of public instruction, on the day he stepped down to become president of Madison College.

Miller will be succeeded by Dowell J. Howard, 52, who has been his first assistant for three years. A veteran of 30 years work in Virginia public education, Howard was named acting superintendent yesterday by Governor Tuck. He will draw full pay of $9960.

Two Principal Problems

The two greatest problems facing education officials, the report observes, are (1) finding enough qualified teachers, and (2) providing an adequate physical school plant. Most other difficulties ultimately can be traced to these.

Last year, 2778 of the 20,000 teachers in elementary and high schools did not have sufficient education to qualify for regular teaching certificates. Most of them taught in white elementary schools.

Local school officials reported they would need 6036 new teachers this fall to replace those who have left, and those not coming up to standards, and to meet increased enrollments.

In 1948, however, Virginia colleges graduated only 1407 new teachers.

The report attributes the acute teacher shortage to several factors. Chief of these is low pay.

In the past five years, the report notes, the average annual salary for Virginia teachers increased from $1151 to $2062. (National average for 1948 was $2550.) But because of higher living costs the teachers have made little actual gain.

"We may overrate the drawing power of the other satisfactions of teaching," the report added, "when we expect our most capable young men and women to be attracted to this field by an entrance salary of $1300 paid beginning teachers with college degrees in some counties . . ."

Many Small Schools

The large number of small isolated schools (1056 one-room buildings) that offer "little more than shelter" was listed as another obstacle to finding qualified teachers. No more than one third of the teachers in one- and two-room schools held substandard teaching certificates in 1948.

The report recommends raising teachers pay, increasing sick leave and retirement benefits, and improving living and social conditions for teachers.

It does not, however, indicate where the money for these improvements is to be obtained.

Local school officials reported last year that new schools immediately needed would cost $185,904,093. The new school needs for the next five years approximated 290 million dollars.

Since a special State commission is now studying building needs, the State board takes no definite stand as to whether these figures are correct or how the requirements should be met. The report indicates, however, that the localities probably did not overestimate.

More Money Needed

To handle the building program the report states it seems "evident" that the Literary Fund must be "greatly increased." It further states that localities should provide a "fair proportion" of the building funds.

The report lists statistics which give some idea of building needs. These show:

Of 3876 schools, 1694 were built 30 or more years ago, and 309 were built 50 or more years ago.

About two thirds are frame buildings and two thirds of the school sites contain 2 acres or less.

From a standpoint of modernity, 42.1 per cent have no electricity, 67.4 per cent do not have flush toilets, 69.1 per cent do not have central heating.

A further plant problem is found in expected increase of enrollments of about 30 per cent by 1957.

Substandard Conditions

Charts included in the report also show these conditions existing in the schools:

1. 44.6 per cent of the pupils who entered the first grade seven years ago have quit school or dropped back.

2. 32.6 per cent of all seventh graders are two or more years overage for their grade.

3. 12,923 students 15 years or more are still in elementary school—they should be in the tenth grade at least.

4. 11 per cent of all elementary school students were not promoted to the next grade in 1948. About one fourth of those held back were first-graders.

5. Only 51 per cent of the children of high school age were enrolled in high schools in 1947.

In every case, however, the figures showed improvement over those of the previous year listed.

Most of the substandard conditions exist, the board reported, in the small rural isolated schools. The report repeatedly recommended consolidation of elementary and high schools within counties to provide a maximum of good schooling at a minimum of expense.

"Approximately 35 per cent of the pupils now enrolled in high schools in Virginia," the report noted, "have the advantage of a reasonably adequate high school program."

The report stated that 31 per cent of the 1946 high school graduates entered college and another 5.6 per cent went on to trade or business schools. But in 1946 the State's high schools graduated only 17,692. Total enrollments in 1948 were 569,215.

Other Matters Covered

The report also dealt with these other phases of public education:

Vocational training—68 per cent of all high school students in 1948 were taking vocational courses at their own schools in such fields as agriculture, homemaking, business, industrial arts. In 1933 the figure was 19 per cent. Eleven special vocational schools enrolled 2368 in 1948. The report urged the number of these special schools be increased.

School libraries — They have grown 68.2 per cent in the past ten years and contain 3,693,022 volumes.

Educational films—Thanks to a large State appropriation, the schools make wide use of educational films. Their circulation went up 400 per cent in three years to 101, 808 in 1948.

Special education—In 1945 there were 122,375 children of school age in the State who because of physical or mental handicaps, or exceptional brilliance, needed special instruction. More than 26,000 received such special attention in 1947. Because of "inadequate" funds this figure dipped years to 101,808 in 1948.

The report was compiled by the State Department of Education with the help of local school officials. It will be distributed to the schools and the public and made the subject of nine public hearings conducted by the State Board of Education this fall.

Police Sergeant Promoted To Liaison Officer Position

Sergeant Thomas V. Slominski, of the Traffic Division, yesterday was promoted to lieutenant and assigned as liaison officer between the police department and Municipal and District Courts.

Slominski

Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said Slominski will replace Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon, who was recently transferred to the Fourteenth Precinct.

Shimon's other duties, as special investigator for United States Attorney George Morris Fay, will not be filled by a police officer, Barrett said. The investigation of Shimon's activities in the U. S. Attorney's Office is still being carried on, Major Barrett said.

The promotion of Slominski was one of four occasioned by the retirement of Lieut. Cyrus E. Perry. All are effective today. Other promotions announced were Detective Sergt. Albert B. Hitt, general assignment squad of the Detective Bureau, to lieutenant with the same assignment; Corpl. Aubrey S. Yowaiski,, Communications and Records Bureau, to sergeant at the Traffic Division where he will take over Slominski's duties as conductor of the police traffic school, and Private Nelson S. Rickey, promoted to corporal and transferred from the 7th to the 5th Precinct.

A class of 28 new officers will graduate from the rookie school today, Major Barrett announced, bringing the total strength of the department to 1864, highest in history. On September 10, 27 more recruits will be graduated, he said. The authorized strength is 1952.

Transfers of 15 policemen, all routine in nature, were also disclosed by the superintendent. They were: Sergt. Walter L. Morris, 12th Precinct to 4th Precinct; Sergt. Robert L. Falls Church Delays Plan To Annex Fairfax Land

Reappraisal Needed In View of Sewer Bond Indorsement, City Attorney Says

By Judy Spivak
Post Reporter

Falls Church city officials yesterday announced a "temporary" halt in plans to annex 14.32 square miles of adjacent Fairfax County territory.

The action followed approval Tuesday of a three million dollar sewer bond issue in Fairfax County's Sanitary District No. 1.

The 558 to 421 vote in favor of the bond issue was a blow to the city, which has vehemently opposed the bond issue, claiming methods of financing it were "unconstitutional" under Virginia law.

30 Square-Mile Total

Fairfax County Sanitary Engineer J. A. Corbalis said about 8.5 square miles (or more than half) of the territory proposed for annexation is in Sanitary District No. 1. The district totals 30 square miles.

Falls Church City Attorney LaRue Van Meter, in announcing the "temporary" halt to annexation plans, emphasized the city is not dropping its annexation plans, but only holding up further action until it can reappraise the situation.

He said the city might want to change the area it wants to annex. He said the city plans to consult further with its annexation experts, Dr. Thomas Reed and Harland Bartholomew.

Sewer Cost Under Study

Van Meter said the city especially wants to investigate the cost of taking over from Fairfax any new sewer facilities to build in the annexation area with bond funds.

The city's annexation ordinance, passed by the City Council July 10, was filed in Fairfax Circuit Court the end of August, returnable September 1.

The earliest date for court action, despite the September 1 return date, is September 6, when Fairfax Circuit Court Judge Paul Brown comes back from vacation.

Wisconsin Ave. Widening Job Is Under Way

The long-planned, often-postponed widening of a half-mile stretch of Wisconsin ave. in Bethesda began yesterday as workmen started felling trees along the east side of the right-of-way.

At the same time, condemnation suits were filed in Montgomery Circuit Court against four Wisconsin ave. property owners who refused to sell portions of their land to make way for the improvement.

Elimination of the narrow traffic bottleneck from East-West hwy. to Glenbrook rd. has been projected for 10 years. The present 40-foot-wide stretch will be replaced by one of 70 feet, with a 6-foot grass median strip.

The condemnation suits were filed against Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Ludt, 8215 Wisconsin ave., for 856 square feet valued by the State Road Commission at $856; Mrs. Rose B. Crow, 8001 Wisconsin ave., 609 square feet, $609; Miss Annie E. Moyer, 8005 Wisconsin ave., 611 square feet, $611, and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel P. Shaw, 8101 Wisconsin ave., 2505 square feet, $7515.

Blanton Barnett, county engineer, said eight more property owners along the avenue have declined to sell and condemnation suits against them probably will be filed shortly. A total of 57 other landowners dedicated their strips outright.

Officials of the Wilmoth Paving Co. of Washington, contractor for the street improvement, said the work should be completed before January. Cost of the street widening, plus sidewalk and storm sewer installation, has been set at $408,000, Barnett said.

Health Chief Cites Perils Of Tetanus

(This is the fourth of a series of six articles prepared by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District of Columbia, on the immunization of children against disease as school days approach once again).

Although tetanus (lock jaw) is now relatively uncommon, it is such a serious disease that it is most important that children be immunized against it as they are against diphtheria, whooping cough, etc.

Protection against tetanus is produced by a series of injections given at monthly intervals. It is similar to the protection given for diphtheria. In fact, a combined diphtheria-tetanus toxoid or a triple preparation, including diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough, is coming into increasing use to provide a durable immunity to these diseases and, it appears, produces more effective protection.

Advisable for All

While previously tetanus immunization was given principally to anyone engaged in a hazardous occupation (military services, dangerous sports, gardening or farming, highway accident risks, etc.) the feeling is increasing that everyone should be immunized against tetanus.

Children, especially are likely to get puncture wounds and dirty wounds from street accidents, bearing the hazard of tetanus.

Tetanus immunization is preferably started about the sixth month of life, unless started earlier in combined product or agent.

Defenses Ready

Once immunity to tetanus is achieved, the patient's defenses against the disease are in a state of readiness. At the time of a severe injury, which may be contaminated with dirt, or otherwise suspected of harboring tetanus organisms, the individual's immunity may be greatly stimulated immediately by a booster dose of tetanus toxoid.

Tetanus immunization may be given by a physician in his office or at your home, or in one of the Health Department's clinics.

Immunization clinics at Polk Health Center, 7th and P sts. nw., will be open at 3 p. m. every Tuesday. The Southwest Health Center immunization clinic is open every Wednesday at 3 p. m.

Further information may be obtained by calling National 6000, Extension 641.

Tomorrow: Smallpox.

King, Roosevelt Drank Cocktails—Not Tea

HOW the King of England and Franklin Delano Roosevelt drank cocktails at Hyde Park, despite the insistence of the President's mother that they drink tea instead is revealed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in the fourth installment of her new memoirs, "This I Remember," appearing in the September issue of McCall's Magazine now on the newsstands.

Says Mrs. Roosevelt: "We sat in the library in the Hyde Park house waiting for them. Franklin had a tray of cocktails ready in front of him, and his mother sat on the other side of the fireplace looking disapprovingly at the cocktails. More than once she told her son that the King would prefer tea . . . As the King approached my husband and the cocktail table, my hubsand looked up at him and said: 'My mother does not approve of cocktails and thinks you should have a cup of tea.'" The King answered: 'Neither does my mother,' and took a cocktail."

Embarrassing Moment

Two other things happened that evening which "seem funny now" Mrs. Roosevelt says, but which at the time caused her mother-in-law "much embarrassment."

In the middle of the dinner a serving table collapsed, and valuable china dishes belonging to the President were broken.

Later, when all were gathered in the library, the butler fell down two steps leading from the hall and slid into the library, scattering the contents of a tray and leaving a large lake of water and ice cubes at the bottom of the steps.

Mrs. Roosevelt also describes the famous picnic they had for the King and Queen. Hot dogs were cooked in an outdoor fireplace, and Their Majesties had their first taste of smoked turkey.

Her efforts to work with wives of Cabinet members, Mrs. Roosevelt reveals, were "rather fruitless." When she took some of them on a housing trip, they showed "no great enthusiasm for any contact with slum conditions." Later they explained to Mrs. Roosevelt that husband took a great deal of time and that the care of a husband was a wife's most important job. They were busy with Washington's social life, they said, and did not feel they could undertake any work of this kind. Furthermore, their husbands would not approve.

"After this," Mrs. Roosevelt says, "I never made any further effort to work with the wives of the members of the Cabinet on anything but our joint social duties. In this field, which they considered correct, they were most cooperative."

Mrs. Roosevelt adds that she liked all these women, but could never get on close terms with many of the Cabinet wives because she had reached an age when making real friends was becoming more and more difficult, and when she was pressed for time by her many obligations.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 24, Chief Support of Widowed Mother, Worries About Attachment to Married Employer, But Fears to Quit Job, Which Pays Very Well

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 24 years of age and have been in my present secretarial job for three years. My employer is around 50, married and has children my age. He treated me like a daughter until last year, when he became overly attentive.

My father died when I was a child, so I had never known the love of a father; and I like my employer very much and perhaps am to blame for his infatuation, by permitting him certain privileges.

I have to support my mother and this job pays a very good salary, so I hate to leave it; yet if I do not leave, I am afraid this infatuation will go too far. Also I am afraid that his family suspects something now, for his wife and daughters won't speak to me or come to the office.

Man's On Guard Against Scandal

ONE THING I can't understand is that Mr. X doesn't want me to have company my age, boys and girls, and I do love to go out. He says he would love to take me places but he is afraid that a scandal would result, which could easily ruin him.

I have thought of going to my pastor for guidance, but I am afraid my mother would find out and I wish to avoid hurting her. Please advise me at your earliest convenience, for I find I can't sleep at nights due to worry about the situation. T. G.

Girl Is Seeking to Revive Father

DEAR T. G.: Someone has said that concupiscence knows no conscience, which doubtless explains the nefarious quality of Mr. X's proprietary attentions since he became emotionally cognizant of your hunger for significant devotion, your social aloneness, and your starry-eyed unconscious bid for paternal affection from him.

It seems to me that you are an honest, sensitive, honorably inclined young person, also exceptionally intuitive in grasping the implications of behavior; but that you are very much of a child psychologically, and tend to let feelings stampede you, instead of bringing them under intelligent scrutiny in order to clearly know "what's cooking."

For example, your letter discloses, with naive directness, the inside story of your confused attachment to Mr. X, and yet you seem unaware of the pattern that unfolds. Throughout, you are (almost unconsciously) identifying Mr. X with the "lost" father, whose early death deprived you not only of father-love, but also of the dependable sub-structure of personal security that father-support represents to any child.

Boss Is Taking Mean Advantage

THUS involuntarily you did your best to achieve a cherished filial status in working relationship to Mr. X, and your yen in this respect was heightened by your lack of young companionship; and this lack, in turn, caused you to concentrate romantic fancies on him besides. All of which, after a time, roused amative reactions in him—for which you hold yourself to blame.

It is certainly true that you wooed his interest, but that doesn't excuse his lovemaking, much less his jealous possessiveness or his candid concern to keep himself from scandal while selfishly sabotaging your peace of mind and also reputation, to judge by his family's "boycott" treatment of you.

As a married man, 50 years old, with daughters your age, he knows what the situation is costing you, in loss of moral tone and tarnished name; and if he cared one whit about your welfare and happiness, really, he would steer you into another good job, away from him, to circumvent temptation that now exists. Since he is too self indulgent for that, it's up to you to make the break; and I think you should confide in your pastor, for you need a "spiritual father's" help in finding your way to solid ground.—M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Child Should Be 6 to Enter First Grade

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The usual age at which children go to kindergarten is 5 years. If there is no kindergarten, the child should be 6 years old in order to enter the first grade. At this age children have developed mentally to the point at which they can absorb the lessons of this grade. Since there is often a variation of six months to one year in the ages of first grade pupils it is obvious that the older ones have all the best of it. They learn so much more quickly.

Any child under 5 years of age belongs in a nursery school only and should not be expected to compete with children of valid school age.

Mrs. R. de F. poses this question. "I have a 4-year-old son and I would like to get him into school in about six months. My problem is that he does not want to go to school. He carries on and says he is a baby and should not be in school (how right he is!) and I wonder if you can help me to prepare him for school when it comes?

"About a year ago I sent him to a nursery school because I was going into business. He went two days and that was the end. He cried and got so nervous he shook all over and would not eat. He used to wake up in the night crying that he did not want to go to school. It will be necessary to send him soon and I would like to get him ready for it."

It won't be necessary for another year, not then if there is no kindergarten. In that length of time the child will change greatly and will have arrived at a period of development when he should be eager for the new experiences of school.

This will happen, I feel sure, unless you keep him so close to you that he lacks the companionship of other children and the inspiration that will come from their excited anticipation of school days.

It is possible that he relates his unhappiness at enforced separation from you—while at business—with school and so has come to dislike it. If he has the normal experience of an active child with friends, who visit him and he visits them, he will outgrow this abject dependence upon you and be ready for school when the time for it arrives.

On Hard Boiling

Hardboiled eggs are so much lovelier to look at when halved or quartered if there is no dark line outlining the yolk. Here is how to avoid it. Put the eggs on in cold water to cover and cook gently for 20 minutes. Then put the pan in the sink and turn on the cold water faucet and let it run until the eggs are absolutely cold. Then place in the refrigerator for further use.

Real Nourishment

Perhaps the best way to build up the undernourished child without forcing him to eat is to disguise the milk and eggs in an attractive pudding. A particularly attractive sherbet glass may be reserved each day for this purpose.

Non-Milk Drinkers Lack Protein

New evidence that children who refuse milk as a beverage have a nutritional handicap is among the findings from chemical analysis of school lunches served in 15 public schools.

The study—which includes 70 different meals served to fourth, fifth and sixth grade pupils—was made by the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics. Schools surveyed were in six States (Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia) and the District of Columbia.

Plate lunches taken from the cafeteria line were analyzed chemically, to learn how well such meals are meeting the desirable level of providing one-third or more of a child's daily needs for vitamins, protein and other nutrients. For some children, lunches served at school represent not merely a third of the day's nourishment but actually the best meal of their day.

Children who refuse milk as a beverage were not getting enough calcium or riboflavin, reports Dr. Frieda Meyer, who directed the laboratory analysis of the nutrients in school lunch meals. Nonmilk drinkers were also going short on protein.

During the Party

When entertaining keep an eye on the ash trays and empty them frequently. An overflowing ash-tray is an unsightly thing and it is frequently the cause of those burns on covers, tables and cigar stands which you could not understand.

To See Out—Not In

When windows face directly on the street and it is hard to maintain privacy, paint the screens with white paint thinned with turpentine. This will prevent passersby from seeing into your room, but it will not cut off an outside view from the interior.

In these days with very few pictures in a room, it takes very little more time to take down the picture when cleaning the room, wiping it off and the wall in back of it and thus insuring yourself against that ugly blackened place from dust after the picture has hung a length of time neglected.

Enameled furniture in the child's room is sensible as it can be cleaned so easily. Damp bran scattered over the very dirty carpet will take dirt along with it when swept up.

Ask Anne About Waxing Mahogany Furniture

My mahogany furniture has been waxed so much that new applications just smear and the furniture has no gloss. What can I use to clean the furniture and can you suggest a good furniture polish or wax? S. J. S.

The old wax coats can be removed by wiping the furniture with a cloth dampened with cleaning and polishing wax (so labeled). This liquid type of wax will soften the old coat and if it is rubbed thoroughly while wet will also remove the wax and the soil embedded in it. Also, old wax can be removed by washing the furniture with soap and water. Use as little water as possible and work over only a small area at one time, completely rinsing and drying before proceeding to the next area. When completely dry, rewax.

Whether you use furniture polish or wax depends upon your individual preference. Wax gives a better protection to the furniture than polish does. When you apply wax, be sure to apply it very thinly. If the wax coat is too thick, it does give the furniture a smeary appearance and is hard to polish to a high gloss. When the thin coat has thoroughly dried, rub it vigorously,—it's the rubbing which develops the lovely patina and gives a hard finish which is resistant to dust and wear.

Do you know of any place in Washington where I could buy a chair of the type which used to be used in ice cream parlors? They were made of a very heavy wire, usually twisted to form a fancy back to the chair, and had a round seat of some light wood. I am very anxious to get one to paint white and put a tiny ruffle around the seat to be used with my dressing table.—L. W. R.

There is a wholesale restaurant equipment company on Indiana ave. which sells these chairs. Although they are a wholesale firm, they will sell individual chairs. You can get in touch with them by calling NAtional 2420.

PETUNIA!

The doorbell is ringing—
Fate couldn't be meaner
No, it's not biscuits,
It's wallpaper cleaner!

You should have dusted your hands with cornstarch, Petunia . . . and you'd find that the wallpaper cleaner wouldn't stick to them a bit.

Bishop-Bracken

I have two very inexpensive end tables finished in what looks like a mahogany veneer. They are so graceful that I hate to throw them away even though they are badly scarred and stained. Could you tell me how to make them presentable? Would lacquering them be a good idea? Or could I stain them mahogany in some way? My other furniture is mahogany or a mahogany finish. C. A. B.

In order to lacquer them you would have to first remove all of the present finish. The simplest way to refinish them would be to apply mahogany varnish stain. This can be applied right over the present finish. However, before applying it, if the surface is rough or has a high gloss it should be thoroughly sanded to smooth and remove the gloss. When sanded, wipe a cloth moistened with turpentine to remove dust and any oil present on the surface. Apply one or two coats of varnish stain. If you do not wish the surface to have a high gloss, rub it with powdered pumice and oil when the varnish is thoroughly dry. To clean the surface, wipe with a cloth moistened with oil.

The pumice and oil is applied by moistening a cloth with oil, touching it to the pumice in a flat container and rubbing the wood with the grain. Do not rub too hard.

We are going on a two weeks' vacation and would appreciate all the information you can give us on deodorizing and removing the dampness from all the parts of our house. —Mrs. B.

Since musty odor and mildew in a closed house result from lack of circulation of air, one of the best precautions would be to arrange for a kind neighbor to open the house every few days while you are to be gone. If the neighbor chooses bright, breezy days and opens the house so there is good cross ventilation, you should have no trouble at all from mildew or musty odor.

If it is not practical to have the house opened while you are gone, here are some things you can do in advance to prevent it:

1. Spray all upholstered furniture and rugs with a solution on the market designed to prevent mildew and rid articles of the odor from it. Follow the specific directions for use which come with the product. It may be purchased in housewares sections of department stores.

2. Do not pull shades. The sun which will come through the windows will have a warming and drying effect.

3. Do not allow articles such as wastebaskets and floor lamps to stand on the rug. The rug will sometimes mildew where no air can circulate under such objects.

4. Do not leave soiled clothes in hampers. If such articles must be left unwashed, hang them over the line in the basement.

Would you be so kind as to tell me the name of a cement (and where it can be purchased) to repair a cane umbrella? The wood tip has been almost severed. J. B. R.

One of the several strong furniture or wood glues on the market should serve your purpose. Before applying, the tip will probably have to be completely removed so that the old glue can be scraped or sanded away. In this way, the joint can be thoroughly cleaned before applying the new glue.

To get a tight bond, cover both the surfaces to be stuck together with a thin even layer of glue, allow to harden and then put on a second layer and press the two parts tightly together. Allow to stand until completely dry before using. Furniture or wood glues can be purchased at hardware, dime and variety stores.

Here is that clever and charming living room you saw in September McCall's. See it on our Sixth Floor, with the same basic colors, furniture, rugs and appointments . . . worked out in a three step plan.

This room began with two basic purchases—the wonderfully practical love seats and a rich, long-wearing Mohawk carpet. At first, yacht chairs, home-painted tables and unbleached muslin curtains completed the room at next-to-nothing in cost. Later they were moved to other rooms.

Step Two . . . You have lived with the room . . . your savings have been replenished. Now come more purchases. Three handsome new chairs, an ottoman, a breakfront with desk compartment, mirror for mantel, new fireplace fittings.

Step Three . . . You add those luxuries and accessories you have always wanted. Your walls are black plum. New additions are attractive lamps, rose-spattered draperies. Your favorite Degas reproduction now hangs over the mantel; there is a handsome new coffee table. You have had endless pleasure growing with the room . . . it is a room you may be proud of. Diabetics Are Assured Normal Life by Care

By Ida Jean Kain

We all know folks who take the what-I-don't-know-won't-hurt-me view when it comes to a chronic disease. "If anything serious is wrong with me, I don't want to know about it," they insist, invariably adding, "just let me die happy."

But wouldn't it be far better to "live happy?" Authorities promise that once fear is destroyed through knowledge, and treatment is accepted conscientiously, the nightmare attitude toward many a chronic illness vanishes.

That's how it is with diabetes. Dr. A. L. Chapman, Chief of the Division of Chronic Disease, United States Public Health Service, declares that the diabetic who knows he has diabetes and catches it in time is a very fortunate person indeed.

"He realizes he has to take a little extra care of himself," explains our authority, "so he may actually exceed others in health. I know of diabetics who have outlived their life expectancy and are still normal and well."

Dr. Chapman believes the emotional factor is very important in treating diabetes or any chronic condition. "An individual is not as afraid of dying as he is of being incapacitated and losing his ability to meet responsibilities and lead a normal life. But there isn't a person alive who doesn't have something wrong with him, known or unknown. The conscientious diabetic is better off than the average person. He keeps his weight down, gets his sleep and not only controls diabetes but also avoids many other illnesses that might have set in otherwise. And he can lead a perfectly normal life—work for a living, play tennis, dance, swear a little . . . just like the rest of us.'

Dr. Chapman points out that the medical profession is better qualified to advise and treat diabetics than it was even five years ago. Diabetes found early may be controlled without insulin at all. And if insulin is necessary, its quality has been improved and the frequency of injections decreased. The treatment is much more simple and effective.

The important thing now is to locate the unsuspected cases. There are one million known diabetics in this country, and an estimated one million unknown. Our authority says that if every patient who went to a hospital or to a doctor for any reason would request a urine test, the largest part of the million unknown cases would probably be discovered within three years.

But a urinalysis does not reveal potential diabetes. That requires a blood sugar test. In Dr. Chapman's opinion everyone over 40 should have a blood sugar test. Since diabetes is hereditary, anyone with a history of the disease in the family should most certainly be tested. And since overweight predisposes to diabetes—about 8 out of 10 adults who develop diabetes are overweight or have been overweight—the obese person should be on the alert.

Hollywood Stars Shine in Ensembles of Fur and Wool

THE ensemble looms important in the fall scheme of things. The dress and coat or jacket make a distinguished ensemble together, and can be teamed with other wardrobe items for variety.

An elbow-length moleskin cape dyed to the exact steel blue wool of a simply styled dress was Irene Dunne's ensemble choice for an informal evening at the Hollywood Bowl. Her accessories were gray, and she completed the ensemble with a delicate filigree pin of diamonds set in palladium.

For dinner at the Beverly Hills Brown Derby, Joan Bennett chose a princess coat of navy blue wool lined with the silk jacquard taffeta—small navy squares on a copper ground—of the dress. The drop-shoulder yoke motif of the coat was repeated in the dress, whose elbow-length sleeves revealed matching diamond and sapphire bracelets.

Emeralds on Beret

With a week's vacation coming up between "Let's Dance" and "Annie Get Your Gun," Betty Hutton's travel selection is a short coat of luxurious emerald green fleece with a high, rolling collar and enormous patch pockets, teamed with a slim dress of black wool crepe. With this she'll wear black accessories, pinning a small spray of diamonds and emeralds to her black suede beret.

From England, Gracie Allen is bringing back an ensemble of loose, full-length coat in taupe cashmere over a block-checked dress in the same color and fabric, the scarf collar of the dress tying outside the collarless neckline of the coat.

Dorothy Lamour calls her new ensemble her "coming out" dress—she has to wait until after the birth of her baby to wear it. The dress is an arrow-slim number in beige wool jersey, with a sleeveless overblouse of pony fur, and its coat is brown-and-beige checked tweed, full length and loose. The accessories will be dark brown, and Dottie's having leaf-shaped earrings made of tobacco-colored diamonds.

At the Greek Theater opening of "Girl Crazy," Jo Stafford wore a dressy ensemble of dark green faille coat and lighter green marocain dress. The dress had straight, floating panels, and the full-skirted coat winged revers and tuxedo front. Accessories were dark green velvet to match the coat, and Jo made the low neckline a frame for a palladium chain with diamond and emerald pendant.

Likes Broadcloth

For a Del Mar date, starlet Rosemary Pettit accented her brunette beauty with a woolen costume in rosy red chiffon broadcloth, with a capelet collar jacket over a softly styled dress. Accessories were black except for a rosy red velvet turban, and she wore diamond and ruby earrings.

Dorothy Warenskjold, brilliant young star of the San Francisco Opera, dined at the Mark Hopkins in a slim dress of dark brown Lyons velvet with a matching batwing jacket, interestingly accessorized with pale beige, and with a broad bracelet of yellow diamonds on the outside of one beige suede glove.

Rosemary DeCamp of the "Dr. Christian" show attended the exhibition tennis matches in a pale gold sheer wool dress with matched topcoat of brown and gold plaid tweed with a cuffed yoke. She wore three gold bracelets on one arm, one a broad band bearing her initials in diamonds.

Americans Are Big Fruit Eaters

How many pounds of fresh fruit do you eat a year?

If you're that well-known character, the Average American, the United States Department of Agriculture can tell you. Their answer is 142 pounds.

Figures kept by the Bureau of Agriculture Economics of the Department show that the average person in the United States is using about 40 pounds of fresh oranges a year, 25 pounds of fresh apples, 20 pounds of bananas, 17 pounds of peaches and 40 pounds of various other fruit.

The Homemaker

The best way to put back buttons that have been torn off the children's rompers or underclothes is to sew the button securely to a small square of strong tape. Push the button through the hole, leaving the new square on the wrong side of the garment. Fell this down to the romper in back of the button and in this way you are patching as well as sewing on the buttons.

Yarn can be shrunk successfully by steaming in the double boiler. It will dry fluffy and soft and the garment to be knit will never shrink in subsequent launderings.

MacArthur Praises Japan's Recovery

Tokyo (Friday), Sept. 1 (U.P.)—Japan in the four years since her surrender has become a reborn nation, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said today.

The Communist bid to seize power has definitely failed, he said—"Victim of its own excesses."

Japan has made enormous strides politically, socially and economically, MacArthur reported.

Economically, he disclosed, Japan is trading with 113 foreign countries and territorial areas.

Its exports for the first six months of 1949 exceeded those for the full year 1948, he said. Coal production has nearly doubled in three years and figures in other lines are comparable.

MacArthur said Japan's once great import and export trade with China must be written off because of the surge of communism over that country" . . . under communism, with incentive completely lost, the human energy and individual initiative which find their expression in production give way to indolence and despair," he said.

MacArthur's statement was made on the fourth anniversary of the signing of the Japanese surrender aboard the United States battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

Concluding his long review, MacArthur said:

"The great and noble effort by the American people, with the whole-hearted support of other Allies, toward the reorientation and reconstruction of the postwar Japan, beyond peradventure of a doubt will prove eminently successful.

Praises Japanese People

"Long hence, history will record of the occupation that its greatest contribution to the progress of civilization was to introduce into Japan the great concept of personal liberty and individual dignity and to give the Christian ideal the opportunity to advance into Asia.

"Of the Japanese people I can pay no higher tribute than to repeat that they fully and faithfully fulfilled their surrender commitments and have well earned the freedom and dignity and opportunity which alone can come with the restoration of a formal peace."

Throughout the statement ran the theme that the Japanese of today is a free, self-reliant man with a growing sense of his individual responsibility as a citizen.

Dedication Set For Negro School Honoring Bunche

King George, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—King George County will dedicate its new high school for Negroes, the Ralph Bunche High School, at exercises Friday at 4:30 p. m.

Construction of the school followed an equalization suit brought against county school officials in behalf of Negro pupils. It was financed with virtually the entire proceeds of a $150,000 bond issue, floated in an effort to comply with provisions of a Federal District Court injunction prohibiting discrimination against Negro pupils and ordering equalization of facilities.

The new school, replacing the old high school, the King George Training School, will have a science laboratory, library, three classrooms, a clinic and a combined auditorium-gymnasium.

Its enrollment is expected to be less than 100. There will be a faculty of seven.

Man Parachutes From High Bridge Into Hudson River

Fort Lee, N. J., Aug. 31 (U.P.)—Robert Niles, 23, parachuted 225 feet from the George Washington Bridge today into the Hudson River and swam ashore into the hands of two irate policemen.

Guards and elevator men at the Empire State Building in adjoining New York City were alerted immediately to watch for the cgar-chewing parachutist who described today's leap as a warm-up for a jump from atop the 1250-foot building.

Not a Candidate For President In '52, Taft Says

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Senator Taft (R., Ohio) tonight said he is not a candidate for the presidential nomination in 1952.

Taft was asked on the Columbia Broadcasting System's "Capital Cloakroom" program whether he was a candidate for the GOP nomination for President.

"No, I certainly am not," he said. "I can't see beyond the election of 1950."

What about the talk in political circles naming him as a contender?

"I never found that you can stop talk, but I don't take it seriously," Taft replied.

Taft plans to spend the next three or four months touring Ohio in his campaign for reelection to the Senate in 1950.

Since 1945 he has served with the munitions board. Recently he has been acting director of the board's industrial program.

Census Bureau Warns Of False Enumerators

The public was warned yesterday against persons the United States Census Bureau said were attempting "to trade upon the prestige of the Federal Government" by falsely representing themselves as bureau employes.

The warning came as enumerators of the monthly Current Population Survey prepared to interview a cross-section of Washington area households for information on employment. These, along with all other Census enumerators, carry identification cards and have been instructed to present them when starting an interview, the bureau said.

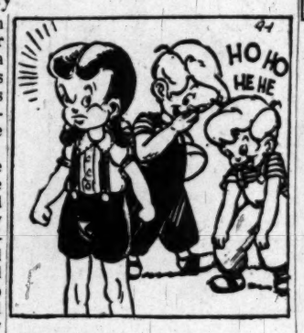
'I Wanted a Girl So Badly'



Fortunately it doesn't happen often, but now and again a mother wants a girl so badly that when a son is born she treats him as though he were a girl. His hair is left long, his clothing has a feminine air and he is expected to be sweet, quiet, and girlish.

Such a youngster's life is made miserable by other children. He is hooted and jeered, called "Nancy" or "Pansy" and generally persecuted. Lasting feelings of inferiority are likely to be developed

A mother whose desire for a girl is so strong as to push her into this sort of behavior would do well to get help in understanding why she feels so deeply. A few conversations with an understanding social worker or psychologist may help relieve the pressure she feels.

At any rate, it is important to realize what lasting ill effects such treatment is likely to have on a boy.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—The Archduke Franz Josef was the youngest of 10 children. To instill a sense of practicality into each child, his father divided a 10-acre plot of land among them, and agreed to buy their produce, by way of extra allowance. One son planted a cherry tree. "That'll take years to grow," his father chided him, "so you'll get no extra money until then." Another planted flowers—pretty, said his father, but useless . . . Franz Josef benefited from his older brothers' experience, and learned how to cultivate vegetables, do carpentry and plumbing, etc., and became the only one of the 10 able to make a living. And now he's the one who is suing his brother, Archduke Anton, the one who planted useless flowers, for the $950,000 of Hapsburg funds which Anton somehow managed to latch onto.

A strange man entered the men's bar at the Waldorf, ordered a drink, and then complained because no music was being played there. He ordered another drink, and complained that since no music was heard, the drinks were priced too high. Then he ordered a third drink, and complained it didn't contain enough liquor . . . He finally asked for his check, and told the bartender: "Now it's your turn to complain—because I have no money."

Garson Kanin, the author of "Born Yesterday," announced that his new play will be called "The Rat Race." The play isn't finished yet, but Kanin made the premature announcement because he wanted to be sure that nobody else will use the title . . . The playwright-director is ever aware of the value of good titles. When he entered the Army his first assignment was to make a movie short: "Battalion First Aid for Gas-Attack Casualties." . . . "It's no good, sir," he told his commanding officer, "you can't get it on a marquee."

Joe Benjamin, the former lightweight who once fought Jack Dempsey in a hotel room, has bought an interest in a heavyweight prospect. Benjamin bought a piece of the heavyweight from the man who manages him—the attendant in the gentlemen's room at Toots Shor's restaurant. In explaining why this new partnership will be a profitable one, Benjamin said: "I always know where I can find the boy's manager. And it saves office rent."

Board Accepts 1c Milk Rise In No. Virginia

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—The State Milk Commission today approved a 1-cent-a-quart increase in the retail price of milk on the Alexandria-Arlington market, but it won't mean a further boost for the consumer.

The commission simply gave its sanction to an increase made arbitrarily earlier this month which set the home-delivered price at 21½ cents a quart.

Producers in the Alexandria-Arlington milk shed had been allowed $5.56 a 100 pounds plus certain premiums under a milk commission order.

The producers said their production costs did not give them a fair margin of profit and on their own stepped the price up to $6.06 a 100 plus the premiums.

The distributors followed suit and passed a 1-cent increase on to the consumers.

The producers then asked the milk commission to look into the matter and see if their action was justified by the facts.

Virginia Urged To Ease Rules On Retirement

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31 (AP).—The State Legislative Commission on Retirement recommended to Governor Tuck today a two-million-dollar-a-year liberlization of the State retirement act.

The commission, set up by an act of the 1948 General Assembly, was the first of the study groups to lay its recommendations before the Governor for probable action by next year's session of the Legislature.

Under the commission's proposals the present act of 1942 would be broadened and liberalized for teachers and State employes eligible for participation.

The commission recommended that employes who rejected the State retirement system when it was first established should be credited with prior service when becoming members and that workers who rejected membership at first but later joined should be given credit for service prior to July 1, 1942. This change was estimated to cost $408,080 for the year 1950-51.

Earnable compensation, under the proposed plan, would be increased from $2000 to $3600 at a cost of $610,358. The State annuity for membership service would be increased from 1/160 to 1/140 of the average final compensation multiplied by the years of membership service. And the State annuity for service prior to July 1, 1942, would be increased from 1/80 to 1/70 of the average final compensation multiplied by the years of membership service.

The commission's proposals also would permit optional retirement after reaching the age of 60 with a reduced retirement allowance from that payable at age 65, although not a pro rata reduction.

Alabama Law Protects Radio News Sources

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 31 (AP).—A law protecting radio commentators from being forced to disclose sources of information has gone into effect without Gov. James E. Folsom's signature.

A similar law protecting newsmen has been on the Alabama statute books several years.

TRY IT — MAKE A PIRATE'S CHEST FOR YOUR TREASURES

Those of you who have thrilled to the adventures of Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island, and have read other stories telling of buried treasures, may remember the description of pirates' chests. Many of these great heavy treasure chests were bound in metal with iron bands, iron hinges, and great massive hand-tooled locks. It took many men to carry these heavy gold-filled chests by their strong iron handles.

Now today we still have treasures that we wish to keep to ourselves and don't want disturbed by others. If it is only a penny collection, a hunting knife, or fishing tackle that you want to keep away from little brother or sister, you may wish for a pirate's chest.

To make a chest of your own find a heavy box not more than 24 to 30 inches long and make a lid as shown. Screw on hinges and hasp, and lock for security. Tin can lids can be tacked in position and shaped to represent iron bound corners. Bore holes for your rope handles, and decorate your treasure chest with your initials and pirate signs.

TOMORROW—SWING ROUND AND ROUND AND JUMP UP AND DOWN.

What's the Verdict

DEATH IN PLANE

Q. A life-insurance policy held by Richards included the provision that the policy was not payable if death was due to "operating or riding in any kind of aircraft." Richards subsequently became an Army bomber pilot. His plane did not return from a mission over Germany, and when last seen was in the midst of heavy antiaircraft fire above its target, a V-2 launching area. His widow claims the full amount of the policy, for which the company denies liability. Who wins?

A. The case would turn on whether Richards' death, presumably caused by the fall of the plane, was due to the mechanical failure of the plane or was the result directly or indirectly of enemy action. The court likened it to a case of a policy excluding liability if death were due to operating or riding in an auto, and the insured had been killed by gunfire while driving. Judgment for the widow.

BARNABY

Mr. O'Malley! I've been worried about you. . .When you fell in—
When I executed that perfect Half Gainer off the pier? To elude that officious little cop?
My friend Rover was there—Did you ever ride seal-back, Barnaby? Wonderful sport! But enough of this chit-chat—Where are our pearls? . . .
Mrs. Van Ess took them—A man gave Pop a check—
Oh, then a deal has already been consumated. Splendid!
Pop sent the check to our bank at home.
For deposit. When it clears he'll issue a check in my name for the full amount less his commission. That's how business is done, Barnaby—
Oh.

Glad to Have You Visit With Us Folks, But Mind the Signs

J. Harry Phillips, jr., of 222 I st. nw., wonders why the Park Police find it necessary to tow away so many out-of-State cars from the National Museum.

Capt. Mark H. Raspberry replies that if you can suggest a better way to maintain order, he'll try it.

Out-of-towners have been ignoring the parking spaces provided for them, and have been parking on the grass and near fire hydrants instead.

Regardless of where the stranger comes from, Captain Raspberry thinks he ought to know better than to park beside a fire hydrant. That rule is practically universal.

And as for the lawns, there wouldn't be much left of them if parking were permitted on them for any length of time. Besides, lots of people like to sit on the grass—perhaps eat their lunch there.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Half-grown male Maltese cat; affectionate, playful." (Lockwood 5-0688.)

"Five 8-week-old tiger kittens; loving, cheerful, mischievous, indefatigable and even housebroken." (Chestnut 9498.)

"Pretty gray 3-month-old poodle pup; very healthy and playful, fine companion for child." (Republic 4142, extension 2838, during day.)

"Five fine puppies want happy homes; mixture of Irish terrier and collie." (Warfield 7470.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. William R. Trammell, jr., 6225 20th ave., Hyattsville, Md.: Where in the world did you get the idea that "nobody seems to want puppies if they're not thoroughbreds?" Just out of curiosity, let me know how many people call in response to your Give-Away.

KIDS WILL BE KIDS

Bill Plampin of 4108 Tunlaw ter. nw. is back from a vacation in upstate New York convinced that children are a lot of fun.

Bill's 6-year-old Barbara and 4-year-old Terry were supposed to go swimming with their cousins, but the lake was quite rough that day so the kids reported back:

"The water is too lumpy, Daddy."

Another day, all the children in the neighborhood decided to play "visiting neighbors," which entailed a ringing of the door chimes each time there was a "visitor."

This went on and on for hours until Bill's sister, Mrs. G. W. French, decided that it was time to disconnect the chimes.

This she did, right in the middle of a bong—whereupon the unsuspecting kids concluded that they had busted the chimes, and immediately took to their heels.

SUGGESTION BOX

Harry Traub of 2743 N. Lorcom lane, Arlington, Va., suggests that hitchhikers form a national organization limited to thumbers of good repute. A small yearly registration fee could provide legitimate hitchhikers with credentials, and at the same time serve to protect motorists.

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

Did you know that Pepco has 644 miles of underground power lines?

LAST BUT NOT LEAST

Newton C. Wing of 4528 Fairfield dr., Bethesda, Md., is another who has a sequel to my story of the railroad that removed the last car from all its trains.

Newt points out that the Nats lost a great many ball games in the last inning during the past season, and he wonders whether it wouldn't help to make a new rule eliminating the last inning.

A very logical suggestion. Poker players who have been "ruined" by that "last card" might also petition for a new game in which there is no last card.

GENTLEMAN

J. R. Thomasson of 2617 29th st. se., reports that his 4-year-old Dickie boasts:

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Presidential Adviser Accused

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

President Truman, who has complained repeatedly about lobbying, is due to get a similar complaint against a member of his own official family, John D. Clark of the White House Council of Economic Advisers.

Robert S. Allen

The former Standard Oil of Indiana official has aroused the ire of a group of antimonopoly Congressmen. They charge he has been quietly lobbying to restore the basing-point price system outlawed by the Supreme Court.

Chief complainers are Representatives Wright Patman (D., Tex.) and John Carroll (D., Colo.), who were largely instrumental in putting through the House recently the bill barring business mergers. This measure is the most important antitrust legislation enacted in many years.

Patman and Carroll are taking their lobbying complaint against Clark directly to the President. Their contention is that it is futile for them to seek to strengthen the Government's hand against monopoly when a member of the White House staff is opposing them. They want the President to muzzle Clark.

Clark's position on this issue is curious. Last summer, when a committee headed by Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.) tried to browbeat the Federal Trade Commission into approving basing-point legislation, Clark strongly upheld the FTC in its refusal.

Four months later, the Supreme Court ruled against Standard Oil of Indiana in an antitrust case brought by a group of Michigan small-business men. Following this decision Clark, apparently, reversed his attitude. Since then, he has been quietly pressuring for restoration of the basing-point system.

Intelligence Chief

Alfred McCormack, wartime Pentagon intelligence colonel and New York attorney, has the inside track as new civilian head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, CIA chief, is anxious to hold on to the job and has been doing some wire-pulling for that. But he has a spotty record, and the President wants to try a civilian in this key post. Latest CIA bust was the recent Syrian army coup that desposed the late Marshal Zaim. CIA was caught flatfooted on that.

McCormack was brought into Army G-2 by former Secretary of War Henry Stimson. McCormack had no previous military service, and has been practicing corporation law since 1946.

M-G-R Whirls Ahead—

Editor's note: It was 2½ years ago that the first revelations regarding Gen. Harry Vaughan and the amazing Mr. Maragon first were published. The inside story of White House influence, now unearthed by the Senate, was first told by Drew Pearson in a series of columns beginning March 17, 1947, which told about the Maragon junkets to Europe, the perfumery brought back to Cabinet wives, Maragon's demotion of a brigadier general in Rome, and various other lobbying efforts, some of them so far still uncovered by the Senate Committee.

Suppressed ECA Report

One of the major differences between the House and Senate on the deadlocked ECA appropriation bill is continuance of the so-called Marshall Plan Watchdog Committee. The Senate is insisting on continuing the committee; the House is opposed.

Senate demand for continuance of the committee is based on the contention it is needed to maintain an independent check on ECA operations abroad. But while the Senate has been pressing this argument, the committee has been withholding a highly revealing report on French attitude toward ECA.

Basic theme of the report is that very little effort is being made to inform the French people what the United States is doing for them under the Marshall Plan.

As a result of this failure, says the report, "this enormous operation, which is costing the United States so much money, is viewed with hostility. This effort is taken by the great majority in France to be a meddlesome, presumptuous scheme of the United States to use France for our own ends."

The report warns that the Marshall Plan cannot succeed as long as this attitude prevails.
